Landon Assails Dictators

Special Dispatch to The Post

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11.—Against the background of Abraham Lincoln's trust and confidence in common men, Alfred M. Landon tonight presented a contrasting picture of "two great bloody dictators," now ruling Germany and Russia.

"Hitler and Stalin force the state to live and die for them," Landon said. "Lincoln lived and died for the state."

Joining the 1936 Republican standard-bearer in tribute to "the Great Emancipator" was James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Both spoke at a pre-Lincoln Day observance under auspices of the Springfield Midday Luncheon Club.

Farley wove his speech around the Lincoln theme of "With malice toward none," and appealed for a cessation of domestic hatreds and bitter factionalism, "ills retarding progress of sound American government."

Landon pitched his theme also upon a needed return to tolerance, but illuminated it with a more international discussion, in which he contrasted Hitler and Stalin, as "false emancipators," to Lincoln, "the true emancipator." Excoriating Russia and Germany, he said of their dictators:

"Their ideas meant, and mean now, to many millions, death by starvation, by sword and in concentration camps. Hitler and Stalin force the state to live and die for them. Lincoln lived and died for the state."

Hits Contempt for Commonalty

"One of our troubles today," he said, "is that too many people in position of influence do not believe that the man on the street—the average man and woman—has the qualities on which we can build. And, strangely, many of the Marxist academic liberals have the same contempt as the so-called special privilege groups has for the average man."

He asked:

"How far dare we go, in creating new powers for the so-called protection of the weak, and what are those new powers doing to the future life of the Republic in which Lincoln so fervently believed? The answer depends on just one thing: Do we have a wholehearted belief in democracy, or are we merely paying a casual lip service?

"The two dictators, Stalin and Hitler, do not trust the average man and woman. Lincoln did. So must we. Government is stirring up bitterness. Industry is stirring up bitterness. Labor unions are also. If this country is to have a real and lasting prosperity all bitterness and distrust between Government, industry and labor must be dispelled . . . A partisan government can only accentuate conflict."

Continuing the contrast, Landon said:

"Perhaps the greatest difference between Lincoln and Stalin and Hitler is in their backgrounds—in the backgrounds which formed their natures and crystallized their philosophies.

Knew His People

"Lincoln had a wide experience in politics and government. He had contacts with the courts, with county and local governments. He had participated in many political campaigns. He was, in fact, a practical politician as well as a statesman.

"Stalin's and Hitler's ideas of gov-

Baby Brokers Bring Tragedy On Real and Foster Parents

A prospective victim for the baby racketeers

By Lucia Giddens,

(Following is the second of a series on District baby brokers.)

Baby brokers in the District are exploiting not only children but the families who take them blindly at great risk.

Mrs. Nina Trevvett, social worker for the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare, backs up that assertion by telling of a recent case.

"A woman from a mill district in the South strayed up here with her children. Her husband is serving a sentence in the South. Here in Washington she started living with another man. She learned that she was going to have a child. And before her confinement, a commercial agent started seeing her and helped to arrange hospitalization for her.

"The agent offered to take care of several of her small children while the woman was in the hospital. The baby was born last June. The agent told the mother she could get a good home for it and reminded the mother of 'all the things I've done for you.'

"So the mother agreed to let the baby go. It was taken from

Taft Defends Plan to Balance U. S. Budget

Byrnes, Lee And Lindley Heard On 'Forum of Air'

Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, Republican Presidential aspirant, last night defended his scheme for balancing the budget against the arithmetic of two Democratic colleagues and Ernest K. Lindley, Washington Post columnist.

The Senator opened the "American Forum of the Air" program, broadcast over a national hook-up of the Mutual Broadcasting System from the New Interior Building, with the declaration that President Roosevelt's spending policy is "the most dangerous any country can follow."

Horse Trainer Stabbed to Death

Propped in a North Capitol street doorway by two passersby who thought he was drunk, James Edwin Blush, 42-year-old horse trainer, of Hillside, Md., was found dead early yesterday, a stab wound in his stomach and two in his back.

At 3:45 a. m. he was found dead in the doorway. Police believe he was murdered by a drinking companion.

House Faces Sharp Battle On Navy Slash

Debate on Tomorrow; Senate in Recess Today For Lincoln Day Fete

By the Associated Press

Economy sentiment, as applied to defense funds, will come to a test in Congress this week when the House takes up the annual appropriation bill for the Navy, from which an appropriations subcommittee is reported to have pared $100,000,000.

Navy supporters made clear they would put up a sharp fight against slashes proposed by the subcommittee.

While they discussed no details of plans for opposition they commented somewhat grimly that they expected "no serious reductions" below the $954,000,000 figure sought to operate the Navy in the next fiscal year.

The bill is scheduled for debate tomorrow. During the week, the House Naval Committee is expected to report the naval expansion bill. That measure originally called for a six-year construction program involving a $1,300,000,000 expenditure, but the committee decided to cut it to a two-year, $655,000,000 bill.

The cuts in the Navy appropriation bill were understood to have been applied to virtually all phases

Bridge Party Raises $150 To Aid Blood Bank's Work

The University Club last night turned its halls over to a game of life and death, in which life came out heavily on the winning side.

Bridge fans and plain people who like to lend a helping hand to those in need paid for a friendly game with money that may save some child's life. Through their enjoyment the "deposits" in the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital will be increased.

This bank, where blood is always ready for transfusions to strengthen children when illness becomes grave danger, is maintained by Valentine parties sponsored by The Washington Post, WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League.

Into the war chest of this unremitting fight against death will go $150 raised by the University Club through parties like that of last night, and hundreds of dollars more from similar parties held by clubs and individuals all over the city this week.

At the University Club the bright red hearts provided by the Post as $1 tickets to the parties were hung on the walls as cheerful decorations and a reminder of the good work accomplished at the party.

The first of a series of similar parties planned by the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post No. 2, American Legion, was held Saturday night at 1916 R street northwest, Commander W. A. Corley announced yesterday.

Although restricted space held the party to six tables, a total of $20 was raised to swell the resources of the life-giving bank. Other parties will be held by the post during the week.

Roosevelts Lead Lincoln Rites Today

Patriotic Groups To Pay Honor To Emancipator In Capital Rites

Led by President and Mrs. Roosevelt, District residents today will honor Abraham Lincoln on the 131st anniversary of his birth.

The President and the First Lady will place a wreath at the Lincoln Memorial at 12:15 p. m., and other wreaths will be laid by representatives of 45 patriotic organizations. Capt. John L. Person, United States Army, will bring a wreath for the District Commissioners.

The exercises have been prepared by the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. Music will be provided by the United States Army Band, and an escort of soldiers, sailors, marines, and members of the Coast Guard will present the colors.

Flags will be displayed before business houses, hotels, and private homes, and hundreds of visitors are expected at the Lincoln museum, on Tenth street between E and F.

Lincolniana on Exhibit

A new collection of Lincolniana will be seen today for the first time in the converted Ford's Theater, where the Great Emancipator was assassinated.

The pistol with which John Wilkes Booth fired the fatal shot, his dagger, diary, and other relics of the conspirators' trial will be on view. In the custody of the Army Judge Advocate General since 1865, they have been loaned to the National Park Service for exhibition.

The National Park Service will present a lecture on "Little Known Episodes in the Life of Abraham Lincoln" Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets.

Dr. Louis A. Warden, author of books and articles on Lincoln's early life and background, will speak, and will show colored pictures.

Columbia Luncheon

Lincoln's birthday will be observed by Columbia University alumni with "Round the World Columbia Day." Washington alumni will meet for lunch at 1 p. m. today in Wesley Hall, Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Dr. John H. Noffsinger will speak.

The committee of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion charged with arranging the ceremonies at the Lincoln Memorial is headed by Col. Lawrence C. Crawford, U. S. A.

He is assisted by Capt. Chester Wells, U. S. Navy; Col. Godwin Ordway, U. S. A.; Charles Mason Remey, Laurence V. Benet, O. A. C. Oehmler and Charles C. Clark, jr.

G. A. R. to Note Day

The Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, will commemorate Lincoln's birthday with a service tonight at 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, under the sponsorship of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War. The allied patriotic units of the Department and the American Legion and auxiliaries will assist. W. W. Husband, former Commissioner General of Immigration and once Assistant Secretary of Labor, will speak.

First Lady Defends U. S. War Course

Youth Congress Hears She Doesn't Think President 'Would Bring Us In'

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last night defended the Administration's course with respect to the war before a thronged and stormy session of the American Youth Congress Institute, which had heard one of its leaders say "the people of Europe believe we're already in."

"I don't think for one minute the President would do one thing that would bring us into war," she declared.

She expressed her sympathy for Finland and said that "our sympathies as a free people" should be just as much with Finland as with any other small nation invaded by a large one.

Jerseyman Is Ejected

Near the beginning of the session, F. Stephen McArthur, president of the Kearny, N. J., Young Democratic Club, was ejected when he tried to introduce a resolution demanding the Young Communist League and its "Red Front groups" be expelled from the Youth Congress along with a denunciation of Russia. This scene caused a slight flurry during the opening speech of Abbott Simon, legislative director of the Youth Congress.

Mrs. Roosevelt faced an audience which appeared restive to register its anti-war convictions on the slightest provocation. She made no set speech but, as she began to answer questions from the audience, she asked the delegates to wait until she had finished "to clap or hiss." Then "you may do either you wish," she said. The crowd rose, applauding.

Finns Want Their Regime

On the Finnish question, she said that even though some young people felt that the Finnish government had "certain Fascist tendencies," it is "what the Finnish people want it to be" or the country wouldn't be making such a stand now.

She said she knows all the reasons why Russia is said to have gone into Finland. "I know it from Communist friends," she added.

In answer to the question, "What is the Roosevelt Administration doing to keep America out of war?" Mrs. Roosevelt said the Administration has wisely "faced the fact that we cannot say what we will do in different circumstances."

She contrasted that situation with President Wilson's declaration that "we would not go to war" when later the Nation "made him go to war."

Cites Defense Needs

She decried a statement she said she had heard to the effect that everything aimed at defense "is dragging us into war." She emphasized the necessity for adequate defense.

Turning to domestic questions, she said she favored passage of the antilynching bill but said she would like to have it applied to the whole country, without singling out one section for criticism.

On public or private loans to belligerents, Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out "we have loaned money to China and we are still neutral."

Couple Married by Telephone As Illness Balks Parson's Trip

Alexandria Friends Listen to Ceremony On Loud Speaker

Minister, happy couple and wedding guests were united yesterday in a triangular telephonic marriage ceremony that took place simultaneously in Missouri, Texas, and Alexandria, Va.

Ethel B. MacRae, 38, who left Washington two weeks ago after seven years in the Agriculture Department, yesterday became the bride of Roy McNeil, 39, proprietor of a dry cleaning establishment in McAllen, Tex.

Ethel wanted her father, the Rev. W. S. MacRae, to perform the ceremony. But the 72-year-old minister of the Church of the Latter Day Saints was in Warrensburg, Mo., too ill to journey to Texas.

Her sister Mrs. E. Marie McCormick, of Alexandria, Va., arranged with the Oberlin Radio Service to establish a three-way telephone circuit with Warrenburg and McAllen. Mrs. McCormick, her son, Richard; her brother, Jerry MacRae, and Ethel's Washington and Alexandria friends were thus able to hear the ceremony by loud speaker, while in Texas the happy couple said "I do," and in Missouri Dr. MacRae pronounced them man and wife.

MRS. ROY McNEIL

Texas authorities searched the records before the ceremony, according to Jerry MacRae, but they couldn't find any legal objection. The marriage license was issued in Texas and mailed to Missouri.

Fall Kills Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada

Death Follows Third Operation For John Buchan

By the Associated Press

Montreal, Feb. 11.—Lord Tweedsmuir, 64, governor general of Canada since 1935 and a noted author who had held several important posts in the British Empire, died here tonight, less than a week after suffering a concussion at his official residence in Ottawa.

His death came at 7:13 p. m. (E. S. T.) a short while after he was operated on for the third time.

Lord Tweedsmuir was the first representative of the King to die in office since formation of the Canadian confederacy.

After a fall last Tuesday at the governor's quarters in Ottawa, his condition grew steadily worse. He was operated on twice Friday and was rushed here by special train Friday afternoon.

The governor general had made progress after the two operations Friday but today he suffered a relapse.

He was given blood transfusions both before and after the four-hour operation at Montreal Neurological Institute, at the end of which his doctors said he "had stood the procedure well."

Lord Tweedsmuir, whose last public appearance was at the brief session of the Canadian Parliament last month, had been in ill health for some time and it was known he did not plan to accept extension of his term as governor general.

Pending appointment of a successor, the governor general's duties will be taken over by the chief Justice of Canada, Sir Lyman Duff.

Lord Elgin has been mentioned in recent London reports as a possible successor.

Jewish Session Assured Plight Grieves World

Mrs. Roosevelt, Hurban, Procope, Sen. Barbour Address Meeting Here

Led by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, speakers prominent nationally and internationally in political, diplomatic and economic affairs last night assured 400 delegates to the American Jewish Congress that world sympathy has been aroused by the plight of Jews in the European war.

On the program at a dinner meeting at the Willard Hotel, besides Mrs. Roosevelt, were Hjalmar Procope, Minister of Finland; Vladimir Hurban, Minister of Czecho-Slovakia; Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey; Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, chairman of the British section of the World Jewish Congress, and Dr. Nahum Goldman, chairman of the administrative committee of the congress. The toastmaster was Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress.

Delegates attending the three-day convention are from 75 cities in 20 States. Sessions opened Saturday and will continue through this afternoon.

"This country should not remain indifferent to the sorrows of other parts of the world," declared Mrs. Roosevelt. "We should not forget that there is much for us to do here, and if democracy is to be preserved, we must get at it and keep at it. But just the same we have much to be thankful for and that should make us doubly aware of the sufferings of others."

After thanking the people of the United States for aid being extended to Finland, Minister Procope said Jews especially understand the plight of Finland, as Finland understands the plight of the Jews, because both have been a long-suffering people.

He was greeted with cries of "God Bless Finland!"

Minister Hurban said, "There was never any real anti-Semitic feeling based upon racial discrimination in reborn Czecho-Slovakia . . . And then Hitler came . . . Only by mutual and loyal help can we save our-

Reds Reported Massing Fliers Against Carol

Air Force Diverted to Rumanian Line, Finns Say, as Raids Slacken

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Feb. 11.—The tenth consecutive day of Red army hammering against Finland's Mannerheim Line failed to make headway, a Finnish communique announced today.

Two Soviet planes were reported shot down and five tanks destroyed.

Soviet tactics were shifted in Saturday's fighting, the Finns said. Instead of concentrating on frontal assaults in the Summa sector, the Russians hurled their heaviest attacks against points east and west of Summa.

The Russians apparently were trying to flank the concrete-and-steel defense works which form Finland's line across the Karelian Isthmus.

But all attacks were repulsed, the communique said.

(A Red Army communique issued in Leningrad said the Russians captured 16 Finnish defense fortifications, including "eight iron and concrete artillery forts" in Sunday's fighting on the isthmus. The Soviet communique did not give more detailed location of the allegedly captured positions.

(The Finnish communique issued last night covered only Saturday's events.

(Last Thursday a Russian claim of capture of 13 forts on the isthmus was denied by the Finns.)

'All Hell to Break in Europe' In 2 Months, Kennedy Says

By Inez Robb

International News Service Writer

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 11.—Ambassador Kennedy, who leaves his winter home here tomorrow for Washington, to confer with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, believes "all hell" will break loose in Europe within the next two months.

"It's impossible to continue the present stalemate," Kennedy said tonight as he prepared to fly to Washington. "I believe the people at home in the belligerent nations, if nothing else, will force some kind of dramatic showdown in the spring.

"But just when major hostilities will begin is another matter. It's foolish to set a hard and fast date."

Kennedy, who regards himself as a first rate "no-man," believes there are no justifiable circumstances for America's entry into the current European wars.

"I was convinced of this when I came back to America before the holidays, and I am just as certain of it now," he added.

A week from Monday, Kennedy will enter the Lahey Clinic in Boston for a final physical check-up before returning to London. At the moment he is freckled, healthy and fiery red. Mrs. Kennedy will fly to Washington Tuesday.

"We never fly together," she said, making an unspoken reference to the nine Kennedy children. "I hope to join Mr. Kennedy in London in May, but we do not like to leave the children alone during the winter, when illnesses are so much more prevalent. We feel that one of us must stay here with them until warm weather comes."

Finns Hold Line

By Thomas F. Hawkins

Associated Press Staff Writer

In the Mannerheim Line, Summa Sector, Feb. 11.—Tanks which throw flaming naphtha and steel shields which are pushed ahead by the infantry are two of the latest war weapons the Russian army has thrown into its greatest offensive here on the Karelian Isthmus, but apparently the Mannerheim Line still is intact.

Afoot and by sled, I visited Finnish positions within a mile and a half of Summa, focal point of the Russians' greatest drive for the last 10 days, but so far as I could observe the Finns still hold their line of forts.

The offensive, in which infantry, artillery, tanks, armored sleds and planes have played a part, is not yet ended, but certainly Russian attempts to blast a way through the isthmus fortifications by surprise attacks on the south end of the line have fallen short.

No Plans to Retreat

In the last 18 hours on the Summa front, which has been the focal point of the Russian assaults, I have seen no indications of a Finnish retreat or of plans to retreat.

Instead, there have been several strategic counter attacks.

Moreover, the intensity of Soviet infantry activity diminished yesterday. Maneuvers to the east and west of Summa proper, and Finnish officers believe that unless reinforcements appear the Russians cannot continue on the offensive much longer.

To determine as nearly as possible how the Finnish lines are withstanding the assault, I went last night under a heavy artillery barrage to within one and one-half miles of Summa village itself.

Shells Within 50 Yards

Eight-inch shells fell within 50 yards, cracking and snapping ice-laden branches and falling into woods on either side of our narrow path.

After a half-dozen whined overhead, our party—which consisted of one other American newspaperman, an escort officer and two soldiers—took refuge in a dugout.

For 30 minutes shells dropped around our refuge and the dugout shook from the explosions before the Russian artillery shifted its range to another sector.

Four times while we waited field telephone reports told of frontal attacks by Soviet tank units, which time after time were thrown back.

Under a moonless sky, the flare of exploding shells pierced the blackness like sheet-lightning in the forested, almost mountainous area through which the Mannerheim Line runs.

To proceed would have taken us into the midst of the fighting itself and the officer in charge decided it was best not to go on.

Artillery shells of three to 12-inch calibre fell at the rate of 20 or more per minute, and there also was audible the sputter and zip of occasional howitzer and trench mortar firing. The officer with us, however, said the barrage was considerably lighter than on many occasions in the past two weeks.

Night and day shelling, he said, often is at the rate of two per second in an area of 750 square meters (about 880 square yards).

While waiting for the firing to diminish so we could go on, our officer host served us tea with bread and liver paste. The dugout was warm and rug-lined, with strips of

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

LINCOLN IN THE CAPITAL

ONE-TERM TRADITION: When Lincoln's first term was ending, there had not been a two-term President in the White House for more than 27 years. Andy Jackson had been the last two-termer Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan had each served but one term or less.

Harlan Miller

Politicians talked about the one-term tradition as something that must be upheld. There was almost as much anti-second term talk as there is anti-third term talk today.

* * * *

IN CONGRESS: The Lincoln who was a one-term Congressman from 1847 to 1849 is almost forgotten. He had to borrow $167 to come here. His pay was $8 a day, about one-tenth what a Congressman draws today, and he lived at Mrs. Spriggs' boarding house on the Hill.

* * * *

But he drew $1,300.80 mileage money for a roundabout 1,626-mile trip from Springfield. Mrs. Lincoln remained in Illinois; here he bowled, watched gayer members dance, told funny stories and sent her $100 occasionally. His record was as inconspicuous as that of the 400 least distinguished Congressmen today. Who knows, maybe there's a Lincoln among 'em!

"—the pigeons are still there"

AS PRESIDENT: On his way to his inaugural Lincoln said "There is no crisis but an artificial one" . . . It must have been wishful thinking. People agreed with his aims, but criticized his methods. His salary was $25,000 a year, compared with $75,000 now. One of his early White House callers toted three pistols and a bowie knife. (This story still gives Secret Service men gooseflesh.)

* * * *

Lincoln liked to walk in the square in front of the White House, where he attracted not much more attention than a Senator does nowadays. Already in Lafayette Square people sat on benches feeding the ancestors of the pigeons that gorge themselves so tamely there today.

BEDROOM: The Lincoln bed on the second floor is often occupied by White House guests nowadays, from honeymooners to celebrities and solid citizens. Occasionally a caller sneaks into the room and surreptitiously lies down on the bed, just to say he did.

* * * *

Fires are lit regularly in the fireplace before which Lincoln sat; the windows look out on the square, the idlers and the pigeons. When couples spend the night in this suite, the wife occupies the Lincoln bed, the husband a smaller bed in a tiny room beyond the tiled bathroom. (A carved hen's nest, with eggs, in the table excites the admiration.)

"—still dark with tragedy"

GRIM REMINDERS: The atmosphere of tragedy still oppresses the tourists who go to Ford's Theater, on Tenth street, where he was assassinated and the narrow house across the street where he died next morning, as if it had happened only yesterday. Grisliest memento: The picture of the woman and three men hanging as conspirators.

* * * *

APOTHEOSIS: On what was a dank swamp in Lincoln's day stands th. Memorial which has become America's most poignant shrine, something akin to a shrine of the nearest thing to a native religion this country possesses. Here Lincoln seems half-divine; the tourist stands in attitudes of awe, piety and reverence, and Congressmen can be seen occasionally reminding themselves of the common people. Here the atmosphere is serene.

* * * *

It was a cozy, homey Government here in those days, compared with today's. Out on a walk one day during the War, Lincoln tried the door of the arsenal to see if it were locked. It wasn't. He was under fire from Jubal Early's soldiers near our neighborhood tennis courts. Jubal's grand-nephew, Steve, is President Roosevelt's secretary.

Oh, yes; there was just one Lincoln-for-a-second-term man in the Capital about this season of 1864: he was Arnold, of Illinois, who was shown to tourists as a sort of curiosity. He must have been the Harold Ickes of his day. (In the Senate cloakrooms Herring of Iowa has been twitting anti-third-termers with this bit of history.)

3d-Term Fog Stymies U. S., Ditter Says

Sees Pressing Issues Confused, Ignored In Preoccupation

A charge that the country is confronted with a "one-man sit-down strike" on the third-term question last night touched off a week of Republican activity that will include Nation-wide observance of Lincoln's Birthday, and the meeting here Friday of the G. O. P. National Committee.

For two and a half hours tonight radio waves across the Nation will be filled with speeches by high figures in the party as they address hundreds of Lincoln Day diners.

Representative Ditter, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, opened the Lincoln Day observance at Cleveland with an attack on President Roosevelt's reticence on his third-term intentions.

All Is Confusion

"In Washington today, and throughout the Nation," Ditter said, "every vital problem of Government is obscured by the fogs of the third-term mystery.

"The task of finding jobs for our 9,000,000 unemployed is submerged. The more abundant life is a forgotten shibboleth. The distress of American agriculture still is the New Deal's unfinished business. Our friends in the Democratic Party cannot even decide when to hold a national convention. In short, the party and the country are confronted by a one-man sit-down strike on the third-term decision; and only ten days ago Mr. Roosevelt, in a petulant mood at Hyde Park, admonished newspapermen against even asking him any questions touching this great issue in American life."

Republican speakers who are to figure in the broadcasts today and tonight include Herbert Hoover, 9 p. m.; National Chairman John Hamilton, 10 p. m.; Representative Joseph W. Martin, 10:30 p. m.; Thomas E. Dewey, 12:30 a. m.; Representative Bruce Barton, 9 p. m., and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, 9:30 p. m.

Hopke Sees Failure

At a pre-Lincoln Day celebration at Anderson Ind., Representative Clifford Hopke, of Kansas, ranking Republican member of the House Agriculture Committee, declared that "the big issue of the coming campaign will be the failure of the New Deal Administration to do the job which it set out to accomplish when it took over control in March, 1933."

He declared that "as early as April, 1939, the Republicans in the House presented a 12-point program, and we will carry it to accomplishment after the great national victory which our determined and aggressive patriotism will bring to the Republican Party in November."

Chief business for which the Republican National Committee has been called into session here Friday is selection of a city and a date for the party's national convention.

Sentiment among leaders here appeared still to be split over whether the gathering should be held shortly after mid-June, about July 4, or in the latter part of July.

In effect the Republican committee likewise will be setting an approximate date for the Democratic convention, since Democratic National Chairman Farley has been authorized to call that party's session, which is to be in Chicago, after the date set by the G. O. P.

Farley Sentiment Strong

There was continued speculation yesterday over the entry of Farley into the Massachusetts Democratic primary. Some informed politicians believed that Farley would not make it a general practice to enter primaries, and had gone into Massachusetts merely to make it clear he was a candidate for the Presidential nomination.

There have been widespread reports that many uninstructed delegations to the 1940 convention would be sympathetic to Farley.

Dewey Likes Dams

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 11 (AP).—Thomas E. Dewey approved development of western power and reclamation projects today before hurrying away for his first look at the biggest of them all—the $126,000,000 Grand Coulee Dam, rising on the Columbia 96 miles west of here.

The New York district attorney and candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, however, made it plain that his approval did not extend to public operation of power projects in competition, direct or otherwise, with private industry.

At a press conference, Dewey was asked if he anticipated the western irrigation and power projects—including Bonneville, the Grand Coulee and the Columbia Basin projects—would be issues in the coming Presidential campaign.

She said that the possibility of war with Russia in case of such aid to Finland was remote.

Avoids Resolution Issue

The first question she answered was from Archibald Roosevelt, a cousin, who asked if she did not think the Youth Congress should adopt a resolution against aggression in Finland. She began by saying: "I don't think you should go on record for anything you don't believe in." She went on to express her viewpoint on the Finnish situation.

The audience, crowded into the Labor Department Auditorium, cheered youth speakers' declarations "the Yanks aren't coming."

Simon, who has recently returned from a year abroad, broached the viewpoint that people of Europe believe the United tates is already in the war.

Cuban Addresses Meeting

Jose Luis Perez, president of the Brotherhood of Cuban Youth, urged the calling of an Inter-American Youth Congress to work for peace.

The National Assembly of the Youth Congress will meet at morning and afternoon sessions today at the Public Health Service Auditorium to discuss business matters. The presiding officer last night urged other Youth Congress members to spend today on Capitol Hill, seeing their Congressmen about legislation.

An American Youth Congress leader, replying to Dies Committee demands that the congress purge itself of Communist elements, declared earlier that the organization had no idea of doing so, "because they are a part of the youth of the United States."

Later in the congress' afternoon session on civil liberties, a representative of the Young Communist League of Illinois declared that the league "loves democracy" and that "the only criticism we have of it is there isn't enough of it."

Frances M. Williams, administrative secretary of the Youth Congress, said:

"The opening gun in the war on civil liberties is outlawing Communists. The next step is the suppression of all groups suspected of communism . . . There is no halfway mark for civil liberties in a democracy."

When Gardner Jackson, of Labor's Non-Partisan League, named the men he said were instrumental in the formation of the Dies Committee, including Vice President Garner, hisses greeted his statement.

Parley With Lewis Planned

Jane Blair, representing the Young Communist League of Illinois, who said that the League stood for democracy, said also that President Roosevelt should know what it means to be called a "Red" because he had been termed such by certain groups when he was fighting for the needs of the people.

Meanwhile, leaders of the Youth Congress made plans to confer with C. I. O. leaders this week on John L. Lewis' invitation for the group to become affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan League.

A $50 contribution to the congress from Postmaster General Farley was announced as a "surprise" by the presiding officer, Harriet Pickens of New York.

Taft Defends Budget Plan

don his spendthrift and insane policy," he said, "it will completely destroy the America that we have known for 150 years."

Roosevelt's new budget was not introduced to effect economy, "but as a political maneuver," Taft claimed.

"The whole budget is designed for the one purpose of avoiding an increase in the debt limit, so that people will not realize the situation to which we have come or raise the question of where we are going."

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, replied by an examination of Taft's "How to Balance the Budget" speech of January 5. He added up the cost of the Government agencies Taft had proposed to abolish, and pointed out that the budget would still show a deficit of $1,745,000,000.

Lindley Raps Taft Proposal

Ernest Lindley followed with another analysis of Taft's proposals, by which he computed a deficit of $1,756,000 for the Taft budget.

The Presidential aspirant retorted that both his critics had overlooked his provision that all Government functions where economies were possible should be cut a flat 25 per cent, and further proposed a cut of $375,000,000 in Federal outlay for relief by "returning all relief administration to the State and local governments." The average cost per case would thus be cut in half, he claimed.

National defense could easily be cut 25 per cent, he asserted, adding that the $400,000,000 increase in the Army and Navy budget proposed by President Roosevelt is "wholly unjustified by present conditions."

Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, cut in with the remark that "the only way to balance the budget is to set right out and balance the budget," and proposed the abolition of seven Federal agencies which Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, quickly replied, would result in saving "only some hundreds of millions."

Ernest Angell, chairman of the National Economy League, introduced figures to show that the rate of circulation has declined under the New Deal, and others to show that taxes could not be raised further without taxing "the small man."

When Lindley asserted that the national debt had decreased from 1.77 per cent of the national income in 1933 to 1.45 per cent in 1939, Rich burst out: "The national debt is going to be the ruin of this country."

"Is there less wealth in this country today than in 1933?" asked Lee.

"No, but less happiness," retorted Rich.

Realty Tax Sale Due

Because of nonpayment of town taxes for the current fiscal year, ten pieces of Rockville, Md., real estate have been advertised for sale at public auction by Fred C. Nellinger, town bailiff. The sale is scheduled to take place in front of the courthouse at Rockville at 10 a. m., February 28. Taxes in arrears, with costs, total $117.35. The law allows one year for redemption of property thus sold.

Drive Shaped On Poll Tax In Eight States

Geyer Would Amend Hatch Act to Ban Practice in South

By William H. Lawrence
United Press Staff Writer.

A possible double-barreled judicial and legislative attack on poll voting requirements of eight Southern States took shape last night in the wake of John L. Lewis' challenge to the Administration to prove its devotion to civil liberties by restoring voting rights to low income Southern groups.

It was learned that the Justice Department's civil liberties unit has been studying constitutionality of poll tax laws for several weeks and has been asked to intervene as a friend of the court in a test case now pending before the Sixth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Today a strategy conference will be held here between representatives of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, poll tax oppositionist group, and Representative Lee Geyer (Democrat) Calif., in an effort to obtain Congressional action on Geyer's bill which would amend the Hatch "no politics" act to eliminate the poll tax as a requirement for voting in any Federal election.

Research experts for the Southern Human Welfare Conference, whose anti-poll tax campaign committee is headed by Mayor Maury Maverick, San Antonio, Tex., New Dealer, said that the following poll taxes are applied as prerequisites to voting:

Tennessee, $2 per year, with a 25-cent delinquent collection charge and 1 per cent interest per month.

Texas, $1.75 per year.

Arkansas, $1 per year, with a $1 penalty for delinquency.

Alabama, $1.50 per year, which is cumulative and must be paid in full before the right to vote is restored.

Georgia, $1 per year, with delinquent collection charges and interest totaling approximately $1 per year.

Mississippi, $2 per year and cumulative for two years.

South Carolina, $1 per year in general elections, but the tax is not required in the primary.

Virginia, $1.50 per year and cumulative for three years.

Justice Department officials said that the decision whether to intervene in the poll tax test case is up to Solicitor General Francis Biddle.

of the construction program except aircraft, with that division remaining virtually intact. The impression was that much of the proposed savings would be in destroyer and submarine building.

The Senate will give much of its attention in the week to foreign affairs, including the questions of extending more financial aid to Finland and China and authorizing restrictions in trade with Japan.

In recess today to permit Republican members to fulfill Lincoln Day engagements, the Senate will reconvene at noon tomorrow under an agreement to vote not later than 5 p. m. on a bill to increase by $100,000,000 the lending power of the Export-Import Bank. This legislation would make funds available for additional non-military loans to Finland and China.

Opponents of the bill said they expected approval of the measure, although Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, thought a "creditable showing" would be made by the opposition. He, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, and others have opposed it on the ground that a loan to Finland, fighting an undeclared war with Russia, might be the first step toward involving the United States in Europe's controversies.

Japanese Embargo Up

Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, expected to offer an amendment to the measure which would cut the bank capital increase to $50,000,000 but even supporters of this proposal held scant hope it would be accepted by the Senate.

Friends of the bill found support in public comment by President Roosevelt Saturday. Speaking before the American Youth Congress, the Chief Executive asserted it was "axiomatic" that American sympathy was with the Finns and that "America wants to help them by lending or giving them money." Then he added:

"That the Soviet Union would, because of this, declare war on the United States is about the silliest thought that I ever heard advanced."

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, said he would bring up in the Foreign Relations' Committee Wednesday two proposals to give the President power to restrict exports to Japan because of that country's alleged violation of American rights in China.

Most Foreign Relations Committee members said they expected no immediate action on the Japanese embargo proposals.

Labor Peace On Lewis Plan Held Unlikely

Offer of C. I. O.-A. F. L. Merger Called Same As Rejected Ones

By the Associated Press

Informed quarters saw little chance yesterday that labor's civil war would be settled by John L. Lewis' latest proposal to march into the A. F. L. with his C. I. O. legions.

The C. I. O. leader's plan to have the warring factions meet in special convention March 15 and vote to take all C. I. O. units into the A. F. L. and give them charters, is substantially the same proposal he has made several times before without success.

The federation leadership, in turning down the previous offers, said that dual unionism—two unions of maritime workers, transport workers, electrical workers, office workers, clerks and lumber workers—could not be embraced by the structure of the A. F. L.

The federation wants the fight settled at a conference table outside the A. F. L. with dualism wiped out by adjustments or mergers. Its leadership has contended that the adoption of Lewis' plan would only transfer the war into the federation setup and settle nothing.

On the other hand, the C. I. O. chief and his followers have contended that the A. F. L. peace proposals would mean the breaking up of many new C. I. O. unions and the surrender of the policies and practices adopted for the organization of many groups into industry-wide unions.

Lewis, advancing his unity plan yesterday in an address to the American Youth Congress, said that all the points of friction and overlapping jurisdictions could be ironed out by machinery set up within the A. F. L. "without the public being troubled or the politicians being driven to distraction."

The response of William Green, A. F. L. president, was that Lewis should make any "serious proposals" he has to the joint A. F. L.-C. I. O. peace committees created early in 1939 under President Roosevelt's sponsorship.

Farley Keeps Still As Landon Hints He Said He'd Run

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley wouldn't say "yes" but didn't say "no" today when reporters asked him whether he was an active candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Farley arrived on the same train with Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential candidate.

Landon, who had lunched with Farley on the train, told reporters: "I hope Jim gives you as good a story as he gave me coming down on the train. I've always thought Jim would make a good President." But Farley denied he had given Landon any story.

Farley said his authorization to leaders in Massachusetts to seek delegates pledged to him "must speak for itself."

Pelley to Seek Quick Decision On Extradition

Hopes to Forestall Usual Continuance At Hearing Today

Attorneys for William Dudley Pelley, chief of the Silver Shirt Legion, indicated last night that they would press for an immediate hearing on the attempt of North Carolina authorities to bring him to Asheville to face charges of probation violation.

Franklyn V. Anderson, Washington attorney, intimated that the 50-year-old former stock promoter would fight extradition proceedings, should they be instituted.

Pelley, who was arrested by Metropolitan Police Saturday as he stepped from the Dies Committee witness stand, will be arraigned today in the United States division of the police court as a fugitive from justice.

Convicted in 1935 on a stock fraud charge in North Carolina, Pelley was sentenced to one to two years of hard labor, then put on probation for five years. Last October Asheville authorities began a futile search for the Silver Shirt leader that ended last week with his voluntary appearance before the Dies Committee, which had also conducted an unsuccessful search for him.

Anderson indicated that Pelley, who was denounced in the Dies Committee's annual report as a "self-styled Hitler," would request a shortening of the usual 30-day continuance on extradition proceedings. He will demand that the North Carolina officials present their charges immediately.

Anderson and his colleague, T. Edward O'Connell, hinted yesterday that their defense would be based upon two grounds:

(1) That North Carolina authorities have not charged that Pelley has committed a criminal act. Anderson said that Pelley is charged with "setting up a printing press in our midst." This, Anderson pointed out, is not a criminal offense. "There can be no violation of parole unless a criminal statute has been violated," Anderson claimed.

(2) That Pelley has not violated the condition of "good behaviour" stipulated in his parole. O'Connell indicated that he would raise the question of the definition of "good behaviour" in his defense. He said that carrying on "anti-Semitic propaganda would be considered exemplary behaviour by some one bigoted that way."

It was learned last night that the $10,000 check Pelley offered Saturday for bond had been investigated by police and found authentic. The check was drawn on a New York bank. Bondsman James Conroy refused to accept the check, which Pelley said had been given him by "an executive of the Crowell Publishing Co. for just such a purpose as this."

As a result the slim, short, slightly stooped mystic spent Saturday night, Sunday and last night in a cell at First Precinct station. There he smoked cigars continually and was brought into an outer office more than half-a-dozen times for conferences with his friends and attorneys.

Sandwiches and coffee were brought in to him to supplement the regular jail fare.

Still Debonair

Unshaven, deprived of his tie and belt, but still wearing his grey spats, the white-goateed North Carolinian still managed to present a dapper appearance. He wore the blue coat and dark grey pants in which he was arrested, but his iron-grey hair was pushed back loosely, no longer carefully brushed. His bristling white moustache looked as though it badly needed clipping.

In his many conferences with attorneys—he has three: Floyd Hatfield in addition to O'Connell and Anderson—the Silver Shirt organizer showed the strain of recent events. He chewed nervously upon his cigar and sat with his elbows propped on the arms of his chair. His hands, clasped above his chest, were moist, and he rubbed his fingers with a jerky movement, clenching and unclenching his fists.

Hopkins Sees British Return To U.S. Tobacco

Stocks on Hand Low And Government Needs Revenue, He Reports

Early resumption of British purchases of American tobacco was predicted by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins last night.

The ban on American tobacco, placed soon after war's break, not only has created a crisis in the American tobacco market but, according to reports from Britain, has an adverse effect on that country by cutting off important taxes formerly received.

The British tobacco industry is faced by a double problem, Hopkins said, loss of revenue from tobacco imports and public preference in England for Virginia tobacco.

Stocks of tobacco in British warehouses, according to English estimates, are sufficient to meet the demands of manufacturers for only about 2¼ years at the present rate of consumption. Normal tobacco stocks on hand are sufficient for three to 3½ years. A continuation of the ban would necessitate use by the British public, after exhaustion of stocks now on hand, of cigarettes and smoking tobacco of practically pure empire tobacco.

Import duties on tobacco have been rising steadily for a number of years and the annual intake of the British government from this source constitutes a "very important" part of total yearly income, Hopkins said. As the war progresses and the government has to look more closely to finances, the ban on imports from the United States, which have always made up a major part of British tobacco stocks, will be lifted, according to prevailing belief in British circles."

While British tobacco manufacturers have been using increasingly large proportions of empire tobaccos, the public preference still is strongly for "Virginia," his statement continued. In 1919 only 1.01 per cent of empire leaf tobacco was used by British manufacturers, while in June, 1939, the latest period for which figures are available, empire varieties constituted 25.4 per cent of manufactures.

Pedestrian Is Auto Victim, Sixth of Year

29-Day Holiday From Death Ended As Taxi Hits Two

The District's sixth traffic death of the year, the first fatal injury in 29 days, occurred yesterday when Taft Jack Moy, 28, colored, of 403 L street southeast, was struck by a taxicab in the 1200 block of Eleventh street southeast.

Five persons, four of one family, were injured yesterday afternoon in a collision in Laurel, Md. An Arlington, Va., woman was hurt when she was struck by an automobile near her home.

Moy was crossing Eleventh street with James Washington, 36, colored, of 1340 Eleventh street southeast, and both were knocked down by a cab driven, police said, by Matthew J. Butler, 24, of 61A L street northeast.

They were removed to Casualty Hospital by the hospital ambulance. Moy died at 3:10 a. m., 45 minutes after the crash. Physicians said he suffered a skull fracture, brain concussion and broken leg.

Washington was treated for head injuries and brush burns. He was admitted to the hospital, but his condition was termed not serious.

Mrs. Margaret T. David, 46, of Berwyn, Md., and her three children were injured when the automobile in which they were riding was in collision with another in Laurel. Grace Jernigan, 34, of 2015 Douglas street northeast, received severe cuts on the forehead and a possible skull fracture in the same crash.

David children injured and admitted to Casualty Hospital were Casey Thomas, 10, fractured left clavicle and head injuries; Richard K., 7, fractured left hip and head injuries, and Margaret Ann, 9, severe lacerations of the face and fractured jaw. Mrs. David was treated at Casualty and released.

Later yesterday, Mary M. Dodge, 69, of Arlington, Va., suffered head injuries when she was knocked down by a car at Glebe road and Lee boulevard in Arlington. She was treated at Georgetown Hospital and sent home.

Flood of Pleas for Time May Make C.B.S. Stop All Use of U.S.-Prepared Programs

By Alfred Friendly

A contemplated policy of the Columbia Broadcasting System to write its own scripts for broadcasts on governmental themes, and to discontinue present Government-prepared programs, may change Uncle Sam's appearance on the air waves.

It was learned yesterday that C. B. S., beset by pleas of many Federal agencies for network time, believes it can solve the problem only by using programs on subjects pertaining to several departments, that are written by Columbia.

The chain has discontinued the Interior Department program "What Price America," after a year's run, although it awarded the program the prize for the most interesting Government series on the air. In its place, a temporary program has been substituted, pending development of the network's own series on governmental subjects.

C. B. S. still carries programs of the Office of Education, but if C.B.S. developes its policy to completion, these may be discontinued.

The contemplated action raises the question whether the Government can find in the future any outlet for programs of its own preparation. Federal radio experts also expressed doubt the network would be able to present adequate broadcasts unless a much larger sum of money is devoted to them than now appears probable.

The Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act was a natural for tenant farmer Bankhead Jones, of Pickens County, Ala. He applied for the loan under the act and got it, to the tune of $3,160.

The Farm Security Administration insists he had qualifications for it other than his felicitous name. But having a monicker that combines the best parts of the names of Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, and Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas, who wrote the act, didn't hurt any.

Speaking of happy names, the best is still that of new Ohio banking commissioner, A. Prior Lien.

Wanted: A Walt Disney for the Army Air Corps. The Civil Service Commission has just announced an examination for animators, whose duty it will be to prepare animated movie cartoons for the education of the pilots at Wright Field.

A quick check with the War Department revealed that the cartoonists are not expected to turn out sequences of Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck. These are fun, maybe, but are not deemed educational. What the Army wants are animated pictures of the oil circulation in an airplane engine and the like. The Army says a pilot or mechanic can learn more about what happens inside an engine in a two-minute movie than from a six-hour lecture.

The nightly breezes that sift down blacked-out European streets are ill winds, but they have blown a little good to American flashlight battery manufacturers. The Commerce Department announced that exports of the dry cells have increased from $1,975,841 in 1938 to $3,379,608 in 1939, which was two-thirds over when the war began.

At long last a figure has emerged in the House who is willing and able to inject a little gentle irony into debates that are usually in deadly earnest, or, at best, have only vaudeville-caliber humor. The sly satirist is Representative T. V. Smith (Democrat), of Illinois.

His maiden speech, a few days ago, for the first time put a little humor into the dull subject of civil service. Friday, in debate on the Ramspeck bill, he did it again.

Arguing for the extension of civil service to give security to Federal employes, Smith introduced statistics for the accuracy of which he would not vouch, on the incidence of nervous breakdowns, gastric ulcers and hiccups among Government workers.

Nervous breakdowns, he said, come to employes in the upper brackets, from worry about work.

"Gastric ulcers is the same disease that comes to the middle-income group, if they can afford it. Hiccups, however, although you may not know it, is a sort of galloping, garrulous form of gastric ulcers overtaking those who get the lowest pay," he explained.

"Whatever the source of my putative medical insight, I have statistics that show that under Harding's regime, when there was neither too much honesty nor too much efficiency, one-one-thousandth of 1 per cent suffered from nervous breakdown—though the morals of many more broke down—one-tenth of 1 per cent from gastric ulcers, and one-half of 1 per cent from hiccups.

"Under Coolidge's regime, when there was honesty but not too much efficiency, the employes suffered nervous breakdowns one-hundredth of 1 per cent, gastric ulcers one-fifth of 1 per cent, and hiccups two-thirds of 1 per cent.

"Under Hoover's administration my statistical chart indicates wide prevalence of 'the grouches.' My chart does not further break down that gloomy classification.

"Under the Roosevelt administration, this present administration, however, 1 whole per cent of the higher incomes have suffered from nervous breakdowns, 3 per cent—mark that increase—from gastric ulcers, and 10 per cent of the poorly paid employes intermittently from nervous hiccups.

"So what? So this, Mr. Chairman. If we can give security to our Federal employes we shall stop the ravages of these diseases."

Soviet Paper Hits Green, A.F.L. Head

Moscow, Feb. 11 (A.P.).—Trud, official organ of the Russian trade unions, today criticized William Green for aiding Finland in its war against the Soviet Union.

The president of the American Federation of Labor, said the publication, was a "fierce enemy of the U. S. S. R. and a faithful hireling of the reactionary bourgeoisie, who are helping (former President) Hoover organize aid for Finland, who is drawing the United States into a second imperialistic war."

Hilarious Hooper-Doopers Hit New High in Pixilated Week

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 11.—The ladies are taking the bandits for an awful beating.

Two girl clerks in a New York store last week jumped on a hold-up man and held him down until police arrived . . . In Brooklyn, a 70-year-old woman tackled a burglar and did likewise.

A St. Louis woman chased a burglar out of her house, all the way downtown and caught him . . . a 65-year-old Boston woman trailed two purse-snatchers to their hide-out.

And a 19-year-old Chicago girl clerk routed a holdup man by yelling at him:

"Phooey!"

The ladies who couldn't find any bandits to pick on scored some remarkable accomplishments in other fields.

A Stamford (Conn.) woman located a ring lost at Christmas, in a plum pudding in Juneau, Alaska . . . and out in Whitefish, Mont., a woman was appointed dog catcher.

The female sex wasn't entirely fortunate, however. There was the Chicago woman who, getting a divorce, vouchsafed that her husband insisted on going to bed with his shoes on . . . plus his other clothes . . . plus in cold weather, his muffler . . . and . . . his . . . overcoat.

If these goings-on seem goofy, though, hold on, because we haven't even scratched the surface.

The Japanese began chasing a Chinese general they officially declared dead eight years ago . . . a Webster (Mass.) horse bit off a cow's tongue . . . and a would-be Boy Scout practicing knots in Marble Rock, Iowa, tied himself up so tight he had to call for help.

To clear up a disputed point of evidence, a Salt Lake City judge climbed down off the bench and testified before himself.

Wallace, Hull At War on Trade, Reed Charges

President Roosevelt was urged by Representative Reed (Republican), of New York, yesterday to call a "peace conference" of his Cabinet members to end what he termed an "economic war" between Secretary Wallace and Secretary Hull.

In a statement distributed by the Republican National Committee, Reed asserted that Wallace was attacking the farm surplus problem through the surplus Commodities Corporation while Hull was "piling up the surplus" by "encouraging" imports of farm products under reduced duties of the trade agreements program.

The Surplus Commodities Corporation, he added, had spent $30,000,000 on surplus products for distribution to the needy when $92,000,000 worth of the same products was coming in from abroad.

Monopoly Committee Calls Insurance Men

Executives of major insurance companies and banks will be summoned before the anti-monopoly committee in hearings beginning today and lasting through February 28, the committee announced last night.

200 Britons Ready To Go to Finland, Vanguard of 5,000

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc

London, Feb. 11.—A contingent of 200 British volunteers, the vanguard of 5,000, will leave for Finland shortly, it was disclosed tonight by one of their number who passed 20 months in Spain with the International Brigade and was wounded on the Madrid front.

The volunteers have been enrolled by the Finnish Aid Society, which was swamped with men and women applicants yesterday and ran out of enlistment forms. On the average, 50 a day have offered their services.

The British volunteer said he and his comrades would await the arrival of the full 5,000 in Finland before going into battle. He said numbers of the group were either over-age or for some other reason ineligible for military service here or in the British Empire.

Landon Eulogizes Lincoln for Ideals of Tolerance, Fortitude and Optimism

Emancipator's Principles Held Lessons for '40

In Sharp Contrast To Hitler's, Stalin's Tyrannical Regimes

The text of Alfred M. Landon's address at Springfield, Ill., yesterday on the subject, "Emancipators—True and False" follows:

As we look forward to the enormous decisions that all the world must make, in this crucial year of 1940, we are vividly reminded of a single great contrast—the contrast between Lincoln and the two men who, out of the welter and confusion of the last war—have risen to the leadership of Germany and Russia. For both of these men claim that they, too, are "emancipators:" that they, too, have "freed the slaves" and given a set of ideals to the nations over which they rule. Two men whose political philosophies have spread, not only across the old world, but have even attempted to undermine the democracy of the new!

And because both Hitler, of Germany, and Stalin, of Russia, have found followers and admirers in this country, surely this is the moment to contrast their ideals with the ideals of Lincoln—their characters and political philosophies with the character and philosophy of the man whom we eulogize tonight.

Many books have been written about Lincoln, and by many kinds of men. Some have admired him intensely, and passionately. Some have attempted to belittle his greatness and his wisdom. But I believe I am right in saying that not one of them—not even those who have attempted to "debunk" the Lincoln legend—have denied his innate kindliness and generosity, and his gentle yet salty humor. They may have questioned his wisdom, but never his warm, down-to-earth humanity, or his infinite patience with and understanding of the democratic mind.

Lincoln Lived And Died for State

What a different place the world would be today, if the followers of Stalin and Hitler could boast of their generosity, their gentle kindliness, and their humor, and their understanding of democracy! How different it would be for all of us—if the German nation and the Russian nation could, in very truth, look up to a Lincoln!

For what do Stalin and Hitler symbolize to the vast majority of this country? They symbolize the cruel, intolerant, lawless, treacherous state. They are contemptuous of man's right to worship God. They disregard and ridicule the morality of individual freedom. The ideas represented by them have meant, and mean now, to many millions death by starvation—death by sword—death in concentration camps. Hitler and Stalin force the state to live and die for them. Lincoln lived and died for the state.

Living here in the safety of America, we can only realize dimly, the magnitude of the misery and suffering Stalin and Hitler have caused. It's not so much that our sympathy and our feelings are blunted—are dulled by repetition of shocking scenes of cruelty and suffering, but rather, their very enormity blocks the "gates of perception."

A man can carry a hundred pounds, but not a ton. There is a limit to our imaginations. Our minds cannot grasp these huge massed brutalities, that make the dark ages a living present. Our thoughts cannot turn so quickly back to the distant and terrible age of Genghis Kahn, and grasp to the memory of a man who symbolizes—not dictatorship, but democracy; to the memory of a man whose life gave proof of his absolute devotion to the theory of the Republic; to the memory of a man who is remembered, not only for victories won, but for humanity served.

In Lincoln's life we can read one of the greatest pages of human development. That page is proof of the force of exalted, passionate, enthusiastic conviction. Centuries of tyranny ended at the hands of this practical idealist, who could write poetry in prose. He succeeded in his mission because he combined the practical politician with the vision of a poet—the vision of a poet with the wisdom of a statesman.

Lincoln's appeals to the people were never based on their material needs, but on their spiritual needs. There was no stirring-up of enthusiastic hate to achieve his leadership, as is the mode today, both at home and abroad. No President has been so misrepresented, lied about, and maligned, as was Lincoln.

But he met the hatred of others with personal magnanimity. He was the object of hate, but not the instrument through which hatred of others might grow. Always the people heard the voice of common sense, stirring as a bugle call, in his beautiful prose. He tried always to get people to behave like rational human beings, and to calm their passions, even while stirring them to fight a terrible war.

Lincoln's humor played over the serious problem of the most serious four years of the Republic's life, but not in a light, puckish, adolescent way. It was an asset, not only to himself and his colleagues, but even to the whole Nation. We may laugh to frustrate criticism. We may ridicule others to silence them.

Humor Helped Solve Problems

Or, as with Lincoln, we may join with others in laughing, to gain the strength and sanity that we all need to make rational decisions, unaffected by haste or bitterness. Lincoln's humor loosened the minds and helped the understanding of men. And, because it came from the mind as well as the heart, his homely philosophy not only offered an escape from the tension of trying problems, but it helped men to comprehend those problems.

Lincoln's humor was always meaty, if salty. It cleared up the real point at issue, preventing confusion and perplexity of thought. It was always apt, and to the point, and—more important still—there was always something solid in it, that you could put your teeth into, while you enjoyed a good laugh.

Lincoln was the rare combination of a first-rate evangelist and an able administrator. He was the one exception that I know of, in all the history of the world, to the rule that wars must be fought by extremism. He fought a successful one, on the basis of reasonable toleration.

It is clear from reading Sandburg's great life of Lincoln, that at no time in the four bloody years of war was Lincoln unwilling to make a just peace. It is true that with the passage of time a just peace became less and less possible.

Sought Peace Many Times

Again and again, some sort of peace negotiations was attempted, always with the sympathy of Lincoln. He hoped and prayed that the war might be ended by the breaking of the light of reason, before that light should be extinguished in suffering and total exhaustion. He saw what few statesmen see—that the best peace is not always made on the basis of utter and decisive victory.

To say that patience governed the whole attitude of Lincoln, the war President, is to say only the truth. Unlike Stalin and Hitler, Lincoln did not disregard human suffering. He pursued the war with the highest degree of energy and foresight. But even so, his forbearance was an irresistible force and an inexhaustible treasury.

But perhaps the greatest difference between Lincoln and Stalin and Hitler is in their backgrounds—in the backgrounds that formed their natures and crystallized their philosophies. Lincoln had a wide experience in politics and government. He had contacts with the courts, with county and local governments. He had participated in many political campaigns. He was, in fact, a practical politician as well as a statesman.

Stalin and Hitler's ideas of government are based mostly on street-corner pamphlets. Their practical political experience has been only as conspirators, based on the technique of revolutions, bloody and bloodless. They learned their political ideas in the dark atmosphere of beer halls and cellars. A very different background—a much more varied experience—is needed for holding power and using power wisely. A far truer wisdom is needed, to make the state serve the welfare of the people.

And with wisdom, and experience, and background, there must be understanding. Understanding of people as individuals—understanding of everything that makes for development of individual responsibility — understanding, in fact, of the principles on which popular government is based. And Lincoln had a real appreciation of individuals as individuals. He was not afraid, as Hitler and Stalin are afraid—of the free individual, either singly or in the mass.

Stalin and Hitler kill off merit when it fails to "yes" them. Lincoln tolerated a Secretary of War and a Secretary of State whose differences with him amounted almost to contempt, and in the end won their allegiance and their respect. He knew that a government of a free people must be composed at the top, as well as at the bottom, of free men.

A free people is not governed by a single leader surrounded by a group of servile followers. A government of a free people must be led by a leader great enough to tolerate the suggestions and criticisms of those close to him. Big men will not serve a leader who insists upon blind obedience, and free government needs the best serving of the biggest men.

It was this accurate understanding and handling of men that enabled Lincoln to shape the fate of the nation he served. Lincoln had few books—which he read and reread. He learned chiefly from his daily contacts on the muddy roads of Illinois. His talk was the talk of the courthouse and tavern crowd. He relished their stories and comments.

Mingled with Common People

His was the lusty life of an outdoor people. Yet, Lincoln did not study them with the inhuman detachment Hitler reveals in his "Mein Kampf." Lincoln's thinking developed out of his associations and his attachment for the common people. His insight and his impulses were of them and with them.

Many a politician has started with this insight and background, but lost it as he moved on to the State capital and to the national Capital. But Lincoln continued to grow, for he never lost the flavor of his early surroundings. He is an outstanding example of what is needed in man to make him great, and to enable him to be of real usefulness to his day and generation.

This was because he was born small and grew great. He exemplifies the capacity of man for growth of character and intellect during the entirety of a lifetime. Almost without exception, it is unfortunate for a man, when he is "born" into a place of great responsibility. He has missed the opportunity for growth, so vital to understanding and true greatness. Perhaps that is why so many of the really great and worthwhile rise from a humble beginning.

It is much better to have the opportunity for change, for shift of focus and purpose, for growth in the nature and character of ambition. You find this in Douglas, as well as in Lincoln. To me the most stimulating incident of our political history is Douglas stepping forward to hold Lincoln's hat at his first inaugural. "It was a trifling act, but a symbolic one." Party leaders must serve as well as be served.

Lincoln's vision embraced more than the immediate problems and dangers of his day. He was concerned about the danger of new powers created in government, in the desire to curb old tyrannies. On one occasion he said: "Is there in all republics this inherent and fatal weakness? Must a government be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?"

Sees Menace Present Today

That is indeed the menacing question of today. How far dare we go, in creating new powers for the so-called protection of the weak, and what are those new powers doing to the future life of the Republic in which Lincoln so fervently believed? The answer depends on just one thing: do we have a wholehearted belief in democracy, or are we merely paying democracy a casual lip service?

One of our troubles today is that too many people in positions of influence and power do not believe that the man on the street—the average man and woman—has the qualities on which we can build. And, strangely, many of the Marxist academic liberals have the same contempt as the so-called special privilege group has for the average man.

Take the terrible history of collective bargaining. The appalling resistance—the awful needless strife—the social waste, of this conflict between employers and employes. All because many employers said we could not deal with labor unions until they showed a sense of responsibility. For many years, this excuse was used to deny women the vote. "We must wait," it was said, "until they show a sense of responsibility."

Industry must realize that if labor is compelled to fight for its life every step of the way, it can and will only mean guerrilla warfare. And such warfare means creation of new Government bureaus, and endowing Government with new powers. It must accept the fact that the average man and woman develops under responsibility.

Converts cannot be made by force to a sense of responsibility. People cannot be taught by force the successful workings of popular government.

Lincoln Trusted Mankind

The two dictators, Stalin and Hitler, do not trust the average man and woman. Lincoln did. So must we. Government is stirring up bitterness. Industry is stirring up bitterness. Labor unions are stirring up bitterness. If this country is to have a real and lasting prosperity, all bitterness and distrust between government and industry and labor must be dispelled.

Only if government stands for strict and impartial justice, as well as peace, can prosperity be accomplished. A partisan government can only accentuate conflict. If the government is to have the confidence of all interests, it must stand for no one interest. It must, with true justice and true impartiality, represent all.

And, if we are to remain a Republic, we must never lose confidence in the inherent political capacity of each other. Unless that be true—I mean, unless the mass is capable of exercising responsibility, there is no breath in popular government. Our perceptions may be imperfect, but there must be and is, more good than bad in our combined intelligence. I repeat again, unless this be true there is no breath left in the Republic.

It is no accident that the autocratic Hohenzollerns and Romanoffs produced a Hitler and a Stalin, while popular government produced a Lincoln.

The principal message of the two great bloody dictators bring to all men is: That no nation can succeed where there is hatred instead of tolerance; distrust and contempt for the common people, instead of confidence and trust. But the message of Mr. Lincoln still radiates good will. The Lincoln legends are enriching the lives of many peoples. The Lincoln language still retains its vitality for all men. The Lincoln spirit still catches the imagination of new generations.

The methods of popular government are still superior to the methods of dictators.

Principles Lessons for 1940

Instead of this Nation, and other nations, drifting away from the memory of Lincoln, many movements gather around the prestige of his name. The principles of Lincoln are the essence of the common faith of all free men. The principles of Lincoln were born of peace and of war. They represent tolerance in war, fortitude in defeat, forbearance in victory, optimism in peace, mutual helpfulness in the restoration of broad and enduring prosperity.

And so tonight, let us, who have gathered here in Lincoln's memory, pledge ourselves, as he pledged himself, to these principles, in the firm belief that they are lessons for 1940 and for every year that follows.

The prophets of old, sitting out on the hillsides of Chaldea, when civilized nations were forming, saw there were certain things you could not write into a law book. They knew that if civilization was to survive, mankind must develop consideration for one another, and a certain thoughtfulness for one another's problems; that without consideration, and pity, and warm humanity, our lives would be filled always with the bitterness and rancor of war.

Lincoln proved to us that the good thread which runs through the lives of just ordinary persons is the thread, the true principle, which binds and ever will bind this republic into a sound and healthy and peaceful union.

He knew that we must have a genuine confidence in the average man; that we must trust his intellectual integrity; that we cannot lose faith in those qualities in man which we think of as spiritual. For it is these qualities that make nations, that make civilizations, that make all greatness of the human race.

Popular government was born of that faith, and still rests upon that faith.

Sonja Henie Here 10 Days Late; Has to Wade Instead of Skate

Sloshes Through Mud At Airport, Alighting From Plane for Stroll

SONJA HENIE.

Had Washington's weather of ten days ago lingered into yesterday, Sonja Henie might have been seen at the unique business of skating on her shoe soles at Bolling Field.

There would have been ice in the fields near the place where the big silver American Airlines plane landed and from which Miss Henie alighted for a 15-minute stroll and a breath of air. There was water, almost ankle deep in places, and through this slushed Miss Henie with a look of distaste.

Behind Miss Henie splashed a group airport attendants said were members of her family. But this story of the skater's brief sojourn here was obtained in an environment of silence, caused by the water.

When the plane landed at 2:25 p. m., the Henie party immediately got out and started walking. Reporters searched among the buildings, but couldn't find them. Three minutes before the plane was to leave, the party appeared, moving cautiously through the mud, toward the plane. Between them and the ship was a stretch of ankle-deep water. They discussed the situation in the Norwegian tongue; but it was easy to understand, for they kept looking at the water and at possible avenues of getting to the plane on dry footing.

Finally they just slushed through. Then they bounded into the plane. In a moment Miss Henie reappeared in the doorway and smiled for the cameras. There was just time for her to say that she was traveling from Indianapolis to New York, then to Boston.

What she thought of the Scandinavian crisis, or of that tremendous income she has, or of flying or skating or watery airports, remained to be learned on some other and perhaps frostier, occasion.

Landon, Farley Hit Dictators

ernment are based mostly on street corner pamphlets. Their practical political experience has been only as conspirators, based on the technique of revolutions, bloody and bloodless. They learned their political ideas in the dark atmosphere of beer halls and cellars."

"Being a first-class political leader," the Postmaster General said, "Lincoln had the wisdom to call in and consult all sorts and kinds of men. Again with fine political instinct, he frequently allowed his visitors to believe that they were really initiating the policy of the country."

Farley said it seemed possible "that if Lincoln had taken office immediately upon his election in November, 1860, instead of having to wait until March of 1861, the Civil War might have been avoided."

"The reason I think so," he added, "is that passions were running high in 1860, and the only chance of avoiding the Civil War lay in bringing together, by political methods, the moderates of both the North and of the South.

"But during the months between election and inauguration, a President-elect cannot do very much to guide political movements."

Extremism a Crime

Farley describes democracy as "a vast cooperative scheme" and termed extremism a "crime" and a "blunder."

"Elsewhere, we see a world tearing itself to pieces as group fights group, doctrine clashes with doctrine, and nations war upon nations. Nevertheless, the United States has steadily preserved the ideal of good will, of moderation, of justice."

He added:

"As a man, I think the use of hatred, and of intolerance, and of evil stories, is plain wrong. As a man in active politics, I have an added dislike of that kind of tactics. The reason is simple. These weapons make it impossible for men ultimately to agree; while it is my job in politics to try to find ways by which they can agree."

The fact that once again it is actually here.

Lincoln Symbolizes Democracy

I thank God that tonight this nation turns, in annual pilgrimage, to the memory of a man far, far, different from these;

Rumania To Boost Army By 200,000

Plans to Add Reservists By March 1 as Fears Of Balkan War Grow

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Feb. 11.—Fresh preparations to augment the men under arms in the Balkans today underscored fears that southeastern Europe might become a battleground in the spring.

Rumania, over whose potent resources of oil and grain the Allies and Germany have been maneuvering, was reported planning to add 200,000 reservists to her active forces on March 1.

This development follows reports that Britain and France have a force of 500,000 men concentrated in the Near East.

Their number, military leaders here said today, held the threat of a backdoor drive through the Balkans against Germany, or they would be strategically ready should Germany decide herself upon a drive through the area upon which she depends for essential materials for her European war.

A Turkish-British-French drive on rich Russian oil fields has been cited as another possibility for expanding Europe's war.

The Bucharest government admits it has 800,000 men on duty now, but foreign military observers place the total at closer to 1,400,000. The calling up of 200,000 reservists, thus, by their estimates, would give the nation 1,600,000 men ready to face any spring danger.

Officials reported that among the many factors leading to uncertainty over the future, and therefore causing the Rumanians to take the extra precaution, was a noncommittal reply from Germany to a Bucharest government request for Nazi guarantees of Rumanian territory.

Such a request had been threatened by Bucharest when Rumania's Balkan Entente partners—Yugoslavia, Turkey and Greece—failed to agree at their recent Belgrade conference on an ironclad military alliance—Rumania's proposal to preserve Balkan neutrality.

Finns Expect Red Blow at Rumania

Ladoga "a column of 70 horse sledges was destroyed" among the Pitkaeranta Islands.

Officers returning from the front lines reported very few of the newest type Soviet warplanes are being used now against Finland and that older planes are employed as raiders.

Speculation was raised whether the Red army was concentrating its better equipment in some other region, possibly along the Soviet union's Rumanian frontier.

Viipuri Bombed

Foreigners believed this might explain why Soviet raids behind the battle lines have slackened. Viipuri, coastal city near the Karelian Isthmus war zone, was the only city raided yesterday. Two civilians were killed and numerous fires started by the raids.

Tonight's high command communique follows:

"Land:

"On the (Karelian) isthmus the enemy continued to attack yesterday, the fiercest attacks being launched at some of our gun positions east of Summa and at Taipale. The attacks were repulsed. There was active artillery fire at all points. At least five tanks were destroyed during the day.

"Northeast of Lake Ladoga, among the Pitkaeranta Islands, a column of 70 horse sledges was destroyed. On the mainland, the enemy's artillery was active, but its infantry did not attack.

"Along the Aitta River our forces drove an attacking enemy detachment to its former positions. Along the rest of the front nothing of importance has occurred.

"Air:

"During Saturday our aircraft carried on defensive and reconnaissance flights and bombed enemy encampments. The enemy only carried out bombing raids in the war zone. Viipuri was bombed under the protection of clouds, several civilians being killed or wounded. In the course of the day, two enemy planes were shot down, according to verified reports."

Peace Talks Denied

Helsinki, Feb. 11 (INS).—Foreign Minister Vaino A. Tanner tonight officially denied and denounced a rumor that Finland is engaged in secret peace talks with Russia.

Tanner's statement asserted that increasing foreign aid in men and materials will enable Finland to continue resistance to the Soviet invasion.

The foreign minister implied that the rumor about Soviet-Finnish peace talks through a third-power intermediary may have been deliberately set afloat in order to curtail or stop the help Finland is getting from other countries. He affirmed that the Finnish government has made no application for peace negotiations and knows nothing about any such moves from the Soviet side.

Red Press Slurs Nazis

Moscow, Feb. 11 (AP).—Soviet newspapers today reprinted a Rumanian magazine article declaring Finland's fortifications facing Soviet Russia were built during the past four years by the German army in cooperation with France and England.

"Such inner 'fraternity' of the great powers was created because they all were anti-Soviet," the article said.

The newspapers made no comment on the article's charges against Germany in the light of the ostensibly close relations between Russia and the Reich under the Soviet-German friendship pact.

American Jewish Congress Hears World Leaders

selves from complete annihilation as a nation or a race."

Denunciation of European intolerance was the keynote of Senator Barbour's address. He termed Europe's continuing wars the "most shocking monument to intolerance the world has ever known," and expressed the belief that only tolerance can restore world peace.

Greetings were sent by the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, and the Polish Ambassador, Count Potocki, who were unable to attend.

Dr. Goldman warned that 1,000,000 Jews will be destroyed if Nazi oppression continues another year. Dr. Perlzweig urged the international organization of Jewry to meet the international menace of anti-Semitism. He paid a special tribute "as a European Jew" to the President of the United States whom he called the "foremost guardian of human values in the eyes of millions of Jews."

Committees of the Congress met late last night to frame resolutions looking toward the permanent safeguard of Jewish minorities in Europe and the prevention of anti-Semitism's encroachment in the United States. The resolutions will be presented at final meetings this afternoon.

Addressing the congress at what he termed "the bitterest hour of Jewish history," Dr. Wise, in the afternoon emphasized that Jews everywhere must work toward the day when "they will once again become free and enfranchised members of the human race."

He said "such liberation of the Jew can come only if the democracies succeed in beating back the invading hords of nazism. Any other outcome of the war would mean the blackest night for civilization, for religion, for freedom, and therefore for us Jews."

He defined the broad principles of the Congress today as strengthening the ideal of the American democracy "not so much by declaiming against fascism and communism as by ordering our own Jewish affairs to show our belief in the democratic way" and support of Jews in Europe.

America still is the land of liberty, he declared, "despite the fantastic utterances of that wretched creature who recently testified before the Dies Committee, despite the blatant anti-democratic ravings of Royal Oak . . . The Pelleys and the Coughlins have their day and will cease to be, but it is the America of utmost tolerance and brotherliness that will abide forever . . .

"We would still understand that despite handfuls of misguided purveyors of Social Justice and deluded followers of the so-called Christian front, millions of Catholics in America think of us and act toward us as if they were, what indeed they are, our brother Americans, one with us as we are one with them in unyielding defense of those principles and ideals which constitute the American way and the American heritage."

Jews are not "morally neutral as between England and Germany, between France and Russia, and any Jew who professes to be neutral between the democracies and the dictatorship is not loyal to democracy or faithful to Israel," he said.

Dr. Samuel Margoshes, editor of Jewish Day, visualized a "Jewish Parliament" as "the dream of Jews" in an afternoon address.

"The future American Jewish Congress I see as consisting of representatives from hundreds of local Jewish councils, including some ten or twenty local councils from various sections of New York City," he declared.

"This will be a Jewish Parliament, democratically constituted, representing all sections and shades in American Jewry, having for its scope all of Jewish life in the United States, reaching its decisions by majority, and carrying out its activities through a well-laid scheme of agencies working together in harmony and unity."

He pointed out that "the dynamic, overflowing and withal sprawling and chaotic Jewish life in New York City, has not as yet evolved even the outline of a Jewish community organization that would be a model for the rest of the country."

Mrs. Stephen S. Wise, president of the Women's Division of the Congress, discussed the part of women in the rights of Jews.

Today the convention will consider how it may curb discrimination against Jews in employment, strengthen the boycott movement against Nazi Germany and enroll organized American Jewry behind its efforts. At a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today there will be a symposium on good neighbor relations in the United States.

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP).—Herbert Hoover asserted tonight that regardless of the outcome of the war, somewhere in the world a sanctuary must be found where "refugees of a dozen races may have a chance."

The tentative hope, he added, seemed to be the highlands of Central Africa.

Addressing the National Federation of Temple Youth, the former President helped the Jewish Welfare Fund inaugurate a Nation-wide drive for $25,000,000 for refugee relief.

Finn Line Intact Despite Battering

red carpet on the walls and well-laid wooden floor. Bookshelves hung on the walls.

Pausing occasionally to answer the telephone on his desk, he told how the Russian infantrymen came into battle with armored shields and in sleds drawn by tanks. Again and again they fell back, he said.

"It was like the slaughter of cattle," he declared. "Our men killed thousands."

These armored shields, one of which was brought out for our examination, are not more than 2 feet high and are shaped like a snowplow with a hole in the apex for a rifle.

The Russians crawled on the ground behind the shields. Some came close to the Finnish lines last night and the Finnish troops went out to meet them, we were told. Many of the Russian shields have been captured and now top the Finnish trenches for protection, officers said.

Some of the shields, of larger size, were used for heavy and light machine guns. Others, fastened on skis, protected the sleds on which the Soviet infantrymen rode into battle.

Throwing back the Russian infantry was easy and the Soviet artillery was for the most part highly inaccurate, the Finns said, but the tankmen were highly trained and difficult to combat.

Although many tanks were captured, the Russians within and the men riding on top and in the sleds behind were "very brave," Finnish officers declared.

The heavy Russian artillery situated far behind the lines was described as not very effective, but some lighter guns were brought to the very front "to improve the aim," we heard.

In the heaviest fighting, upwards of 170 planes supported the Soviet artillery and by smoke signals attempted to direct the firing. Planes could be heard over the lines most of Saturday, but the murky sky hid them from view. They bombed in the afternoon but without apparent effect.

Legislative Sabotage

Before passing the Ramspeck bill covering exempt Federal employes into the civil service, the House approved an amendment to that measure which makes it utterly unacceptable.

The amendment would deprive all Federal employes located in the District of the benefits of the Ramspeck proposal, if they came from States having more than their quota of classified positions. Until the quotas of all the States had been filled, these unfortunates could not acquire civil service status, or be transferred or promoted to any civil service position. As 39 States are underapportioned, Federal employes coming from the District and the remaining States would have a slim chance of ever acquiring civil service status.

Since most of the excess quotas are assignable to the District and the nearby States of Virginia and Maryland, it is these resident groups that would be chiefly discriminated against.

Whether the House deliberately passed the offending amendment for the purpose of sabotaging the Ramspeck proposal, or whether Congressmen were influenced by the hope of acquiring patronage for their States by "squeezing out" several thousand residents of the District and adjacent areas is not known. Whatever their motives may have been, they showed a callous disregard for the public interest in voting to bring certain employes into the classified service, while excluding others who may be as well or even better qualified.

The excluded group might or might not lose their jobs, but they would certainly be demoralized by inability to obtain promotions and by uncertainty of tenure. Passage of the amendment by a large majority vote is discouraging, because it indicates that many Congressmen are more interested in capturing jobs for their constituents than they are in raising the standards of efficiency in the service.

The apportionment principle is fundamentally inconsistent with a genuine merit system of appointment. But if it were applied only to future appointments, it would at least be much less damaging. Its application to those already employed would introduce unutterable confusion and discredit Representative Ramspeck's plan for a comprehensive civil service.

Mr. Lewis' Offer

The controversy between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. cannot be settled, of course, by any formula such as that outlined by John L. Lewis in his speech before the American Youth Congress.

Mr. Lewis suggested that the two groups hold conventions in the same hall at the same time, and vote on a resolution calling for the return of the C. I. O. to the A. F. of L. In case of an affirmative vote, the A. F. of L. would be expected to grant charters to each unit of the C. I. O., leaving questions of detail for later consideration. Since the jurisdictional conflicts between C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions constitute a major, if not the chief, obstacle to a reconciliation, this stipulation obviously makes Mr. Lewis' offer unacceptable in its present form.

But the fact that a definite plan has been put forward after a period of marking time is a challenge to Mr. Green to make a reasonable counter-offer. The rank and file of organized labor as well as the general public has lost patience with the futile wrangling of the leaders of the opposing factions. The increasingly vociferous demands for a peaceful solution of the conflict cannot be silenced by trying to place the blame for an impasse upon the shoulders of either Mr. Lewis or Mr. Green. They are both responsible in large measure for the present unsatisfactory state of affairs.

It is now up to the A. F. of L. to make a reply to the Lewis offer—a reply that will keep the door open to negotiations. If there is a genuine wish to effect a settlement of differences, the barriers that divide the two factions will not prove insurmountable. Indeed, Daniel J. Tobin, head of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, recently stated that a reconciliation could be effected without compelling either the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O. to sacrifice very much. In his opinion the uncompromising attitude of a few men on both sides accounts for the prolongation of factional strife.

If Mr. Green continues to treat the C. I. O. as a rebellious minority group whose return to the fold calls for disciplinary measures, the hope of peace might as well be abandoned. On the other hand, if the C. I. O. head demands readmission to the fold on his own terms, the prospect of a settlement will be virtually nil. Unless the leaders of both sides are prepared to abandon the tactics heretofore employed, labor must either endure the handicap of a dual organization, or else depose the leaders who stand in the way of a unified, progressive labor movement.

Spirit Of Democracy

It is not by accident that a vast number of speeches are being made this year to commemorate Lincoln's birthday. The occasion brought dozens of Republican orators into the field, many of whom took advantage of the occasion to deliver 1940 campaign addresses. But Lincoln is not alone the hero of the G. O. P. The legend surrounding his name is the heritage of the entire American people, and there is an excellent reason why it should be emphasized at this time.

Lincoln piloted the United States through its greatest crisis in the true spirit of democracy. As former Gov. Alfred M. Landon pointed out in his address at Springfield, Ill., yesterday, the Civil War President "is remembered, not only for victories won, but for humanity served." The self-styled "emancipators" of today force men to live and die at their command. Lincoln, as Mr. Landon notes, lived and died for the nation whose humble servant he was, with the love of humanity always strong in his heart.

As the world moves on from one crisis to another this quality in the great American Emancipator acquires new significance. He saved a great experiment in democracy from collapse by clinging tenaciously to democratic ideals and to his faith in the individual citizen. He had a true insight into, and appreciation of, the democratic mind. In a period that might easily have led to dictatorship, he had the wisdom and the courage to preserve the spirit and practice of popular government.

It must not be supposed that Lincoln, in his day, was unconcerned by the tendency to concentrate power in the hands of the Government. "Is there," he asked, "in all republics this inherent and fatal weakness? Must a government be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence?" He clearly saw the danger that, in alleviating a national emergency, the basic aims of a democratic government may be sacrificed.

Almost everyone in this country is outraged by the lawlessness, intolerance and contempt for freedom manifested by the dictators in Europe. A much smaller number is concerned over the pressure in this county for departure from democratic practices in meeting exigencies of the present day. Many who abhor communism and fascism are quite willing to dump all of their problems into the lap of the Federal Government. They give lipservice to democracy even while abandoning its background of individual responsibility.

The true aim of democracy is not to set up a government strong enough to solve the social and economic problems of the people, but to encourage the education, training and self-development of men and women who will be capable of solving their own problems. The chief role of government is to protect the citizen in his rights and to uphold the rules of fair play. When and if government takes over responsibility for the prosperity of the nation, it inevitably moves from the role of servant of the people to that of master. And when that happens democracy becomes a hollow theory.

So the spirit of genuine democracy with which Lincoln met the crisis of his day has a special meaning for this age of turmoil. The very fact that Lincoln's humble, yet profound, philosophy of government has made such a lasting impression upon the minds of Americans suggests that, while some of its advocates are short-sighted, the spirit of democracy in this country is still virile.

Another Hat In The Ring

Postmaster General Farley's decision that he will be an active candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination does not place him in direct opposition to a third term for President Roosevelt. Should the President later decide to run, Mr. Farley could gracefully step aside in favor of his chief. All that can be said at present is that the chairman of the Democratic National Committee is not willing further to restrain his own aspirations while Mr. Roosevelt is making up his mind.

Other candidates for the nomination may be expected to follow a similar course. They cannot indefinitely keep silent merely because the President does not wish to make his intentions known. Vice President Garner has been in the race for weeks, and there are prospects of a direct contest between the President and Vice President for Illinois' delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Mr. Garner is believed to be hostile to the third-term movement, but Mr. Farley's lead has now given even the third-termers who also entertain personal aspirations their cue to enter the race.

All these aspirants may later withdraw if the President seeks another term. In the meantime, however, they will probably divert some attention from the clamor of various groups for a third term. And the longer they are permitted to campaign in their own behalf, the more embarrassing it will be for the President to enter the race.

Mr. Roosevelt is thus at liberty to continue playing the role of the Sphinx if he wishes. But it is now evident that his silence will not deter other Democrats from throwing their hats into the ring and making a bid for the nomination.

Prompt Action Needed

At the request of the Board of Trade and 18 other local organizations, the House District Committee has postponed consideration of the McGehee bill amending the District Unemployment Compensation Act. That move should afford ample time for discussion of proposed changes and clarification of any obscurities of phrasing that may have given rise to misunderstandings.

The main purposes of the bill are clear. It is intended to afford speedy and justified tax relief to local employers who are currently paying into the unemployment insurance fund much more money than is needed to provide a safe reserve. It also provides for an increase in unemployment insurance benefits which would make the District insurance system one of the most liberal in the country.

There is no valid reason for delaying the proposed reduction in unemployment payroll levies to bring them into line with the contributions exacted by most of the States. It is absurd for the District to exact higher than average payments from employers when it is paying out in benefits just about one-fourth of the sums currently collected. During the last fiscal year, in fact, the percentage of benefits paid to taxes collected from employers of insured workers was lower in the District than in any State of the Union.

It requires very little study of the local situation to reach the conclusion that tax relief and larger benefits are both feasible and desirable. There is, however, a real danger that controversies over certain features of the McGehee bill will delay action indefinitely. That will almost certainly be the case if advocates of the so-called merit rating system, insist upon retention of the provisions of the present law calling for its introduction next year. Under that system the contributions of employer groups would vary in accord with the stability or lack of stability of employment in each group. The pending bill would hold this change in abeyance until the District Unemployment Compensation Board has studied and reported upon the advisability of its introduction.

Since there is considerable opposition to this new "experience rating" system in official circles and the Social Security Board has recommended further study of the subject, it seems most unwise to press the issue at this time.

It would also be short-sighted for local employer organizations to be swayed by appeals from representatives of outside groups who fear that a higher scale of District benefits would lead to corresponding increases and possibly higher pay roll taxes in their own communities. Unemployment insurance is based upon local laws, locally administered. Each State has to deal with its problems according to its means and with reference to peculiar local employment conditions. The District is favored by relatively stable employment conditions and is, therefore, able to provide fairly liberal benefits without imposing extra heavy taxes on employers.

The outlook for favorable action on the McGehee bill is further jeopardized by the attitude of spokesmen for organized labor who claim the proposed increases in benefits are not liberal enough. In thus opposing a very generous measure, representatives of labor are simply adding strength to the opposition which claims that benefits would be excessive.

The wise procedure for District employers who seek tax relief and District employes who want increased benefits is to work for passage of the McGehee bill which makes substantial concessions to both sides. By making demands that are certain to encounter determined opposition, they provide Congress with a valid excuse for indefinite postponement of changes that should be made at once.

Procrustes' Bed

The Post Impressionist

Isaac Gans

Isaac Gans, whose useful, helpful life ended at 80 years, was more than a philanthropist in money and in gifts of assistance.

Among all the stories of Isaac Gans' public service and personal kindness there is the story, known only to a few friends, of what they consider his greatest act of kindness.

John Martin, a reporter on a Washington newspaper, contracted tuberculosis. His work had given him an acquaintance with Isaac Gans, as it had with many other prominent men, and when he was ordered to a sanatorium, he said to this friend:

"You know it is bad enough that I have tuberculosis, but worse that I shall have to leave all that is so dear to me. I am in a way part of everything that takes place around here, but now I must leave it all behind. I shall not know what the fellows are doing."

"Don't worry, John," said Isaac Gans, "I'll write you every day about happenings you are interested in, and I'll tell you exactly what's going on among the fellows."

For five years, seven months and fifteen days without a single exception regardless of urgent business or tempting pleasures, Isaac Gans took a few minutes to dictate a letter to his secretary for John Martin. Each Sunday a special delivery letter reached the man at the sanatorium.

Each letter contained bits of gossip about happenings in Washington; who was elected director of such and such a corporation; who was the best after-dinner speaker the night before; who was promoted in the newspaper office; what Congress was or was not doing for the interest of the city.

John Martin received the highlights of the current events of his beloved Washington. Frequently the letters contained newspaper clippings and photographs of events. Sometimes, when business took Isaac Gans out of the city, he would say to his secretary:

"I will not be able to get John's letter off tomorrow. To make sure he hears from us, you write him in the morning and give him all the gossip that comes into the office."

On such days John always received two letters, for Isaac Gans never failed to write one himself in long hand. He went to Europe, Cuba and Panama, and each day wrote John. Of course, on shipboard he could not mail the letters, so when he reached port there would be a whole stack of letters to mail to John Martin.

Mr. Gans was often asked if he didn't become tired of writing these daily letters.

"No," he would say, "it adds pleasure to the day's doing."

John Martin wrote to his faithful friend when he was able. There was a bird's nest under the eaves outside the porch screen by John's window. Often his letters would contain descriptions of the birds, which would come there season after season for feedings, and would sing to him. Some would come on his bed as if to make his acquaintance.

Perhaps it was the writing of passages in his letters to Isaac Gans that gave John Martin the idea of writing his book, "The Wayside Inn for Birds." In many public schools throughout the country, John Martin's book is used as a text.

John died before his book was finished, but John Hay, jr., Asheville, N. C., novelist, finished it, and it was published as a "health supplementary reader." Mr. Hay was one of the many Asheville folk who used to visit John Martin during his long illness. The two had been friends in newspaper work in Washington.

"The Wayside Inn for Birds" was a cigar box in a tree alongside John Martin's sleeping porch. The story of how the birds made friends with the man in the bed on the porch delights not only children, but grown-ups, of whom Isaac Gans was the first, and remained among the outstanding. Rereading John Martin's book he would recall days and years of friendship with its patient author, who was so much interested in life even when the shadow of death was closing in on him.

John Hay knew of Isaac Gans' letters and has written gratefully of this benison of friendship.

Each year on the 11th of October, John's birthday, Mr. Gans would have the President of the United States, Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover and members of their Cabinets send greetings to the erstwhile reporter. During John's illness celebrities such as Walter Johnson, Roxy and many others sent gifts and messages. Isaac Gans was John Martin's faithful press agent.

He considered John Martin's book about the bravest book ever written, because of its eager happiness in the lives, antics and adventures of the feathered folk who greeted the stricken writer with their cheerful songs and chirrups and peered at him with bright eyes from their wayside inn.

If Isaac Gans ever talked to you of John Martin, and his book, he would want you to realize the courage, fortitude and gentleness of spirit that prompted its writing. Quite probably he'd have opened a drawer in his desk, taken therefrom a copy of "The Wayside Inn for Birds," inscribed it, and presented it to you, with an air of pride in John Martin's triumph over tragic adversity.

Then you might be reminded of what was meant when it was written long ago that "out of the strong came forth sweetness."

Mr. Browder's Sentence

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some time ago, before the outbreak of the European war, I heard on the radio Mr. Browder, the secretary of the Communist Party, saying we can keep America out of war by keeping war out of the world. We have been condemning Mr. Browder as a dangerous element.

He was sentenced to four years prison and $2,000 fine for traveling under an assumed name some years ago. While I don't approve of people taking an oath lightly, I can't see how this would make him a dangerous element.

Knight Of Rock Creek

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three cheers for the Washington police!

While driving yesterday through Rock Creek Park a rubber hose in the engine burst and before we knew it we were covered with a smudge of smoke. Very quickly an officer appeared, understood the trouble, took my husband to a garage and very soon was back again with a new hose and a mechanic. Our car was repaired in no time, the officer getting the water for the radiator and filling it himself.

A more courteous and considerate knight could not have been found at King Arthur's Round Table.

Finnish Miracle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Russia, even with her 180 million inhabitants, cannot long hold out at the present rate of slaughter of her armies by Finland. Every day red patrols, red divisions and red armies are being wiped out by Mannerheim's democratic forces. In the Arctic night Finnish operated klieg lights blind the invading Muscovite hordes while ski soldiers, wearing white sheets, mow them down.

And what makes it all seem so miraculous to me is that I have not yet read where a military Finn has been killed. It is true that unarmed civilians are massacred; but even those losses can be avoided if the people will only keep away from schools, cathedrals and hospitals.

The phenomenon of bombs invariably falling on religious, educational and sanitarian structures, when dropped by myopic Russian boobs, will be a study for the psychic researchers after the war is over.

Uncle Sam should hurry and commit himself to participation in Finnish (and English and French) defense.

Then the need for these hourly dispatches from Finland (via points west, south and east) will cease.

Spiritual And Material

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In every State, city, village and farm house in the United States are many of our fellow citizens who would like to know what has palsied the minds and hearts and deadened the consciences of those who control our Government.

Why do they not grant the prayers and wishes of the overwhelming majority of our people and supply the necessary planes and munitions to enable the Finns to hold off the onrush of Russia? A friend is a man who stands by his friend whatever the cost may be, and to the bitter, ultimate end.

For some years now we have adopted an invariable rule: to praise the Finns as the world's outstanding exemplars of all that is fine and noble, implying that they alone are worthy to stand alongside of us in the closest bonds of friendship as equals; and while praising the Finns, we never fail to belittle those other great peoples who are standing up against the oppressors of small and weaker nations. How can we hold up our heads again after our heartless betrayal of Finland and her people? "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"—Matthew, Chapter 16, verse 26.

It has been often stated publicly that we must keep out of the war and conserve our strength to the end that we may, with other neutrals, enforce a just peace.

Only those nations which, while the fighting still goes on, do something practical to end the war will have a right to sit in the council of those who draft the peace treaty at its close. And unless victory comes to those on whose side all our sympathies lie, we shall have forever lost the one chance we have of reviving the faith of the world in democracy, and, worse than everything else, we shall have lost our self-respect.

Meaning The President?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those critics who berate the so-called Communists in the American youth movement as an influence insidious and antipatriotic should realize there is an affinity between them and those whom they attack. The recognition of this affinity is prevented by a mere word.

The critics of the misnamed Communists are concerned that a society controlled by the few in the interest of the few shall not perish from the earth. With the change in party line, there may be a difference of opinion as to whether the few who are to dominate shall be only those who reside in Moscow or whether the ruling ones of New York and the Stalintern shall share power. But the practice of supporting, and sharing in their humble way, the dominant power of the few to exploit the many, is a principle common to the critics of the right and the Stalinists whom they abuse.

In short, the word Communist should be dropped as a term to which the Stalinists have no title. It is a bar to a complete affinity between these compatriots of the right and the left. In common, these two defenders of the status quo have no interest in the class war and in the development of a revolutionary working class movement which has for its goal the overthrow of capitalism and any new form of exploitation.

It is, indeed, the "unkindest cut of all" that these supporters of Hitler's blood-brother should be charged with desiring communism for the laboring masses.

It All Depends On The Girl

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was happy when I picked up The Post of February 9 to note that you had an editorial on the subject of inventories. That, price levels and earnings have kept me awake now for several nights.

As I read the editorial I hoped I might get light which would enable me to solve my problem and thus sleep better. But when I got through with the various aspects of the picture you present, I found myself more wakeful than ever.

I do not know whether I should be writing to you, or to Mary Haworth, or to the financial editor; but as you no doubt are acquainted with the others, perhaps you will consult with them.

To come to the point, I spent some time in economic and financial research in the Government service. I am still interested in the subjects of my former research.

Thinking about inventories, concerning which Government officials have issued warnings, and noting the declining trend in the Federal Reserve and other production indices, I came to the conclusion a little while ago that stocks were apt to go down because earnings would go down, because volume of sales were going down, and because inventories were admittedly overstimulated in September and early October. Price levels were also observed to be on the downgrade. So I made up my mind that I would sell stocks "short."

My purpose in doing this was high-minded. I have a girl friend, and it was to do something for her that I was moved to sell "short."

So I sold 10 shares of Bethlehem Steel, which I noticed was an active stock and responsive to changing influences. Soon I had $50 in paper profit. The unfavorable trends seemed to continue, and all was going well. I told my girl friend the $50 would make her a very lovely birthday present when the time came—and I may say that her birthday is not far off.

Then came the announcement of big declines in the rate of production at the various steel centers—Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago and elsewhere. They were worse than I anticipated, and I have to admit that I was pleased. I thought that in addition to the birthday present I might have something for a surprise at Easter.

I hope you do not think that I am tough. After all, short selling is regulated by the SEC, and thereby officially recognized as a legitimate function. It is true that most people don't do it, but if the function is necessary or useful, then I perform a greater service.

When the steel figures came out, however, the stocks went up instead of down. I placed an order to buy—of course at a limit but they did not reach the limit—and now I am not ahead. I am, in fact, behind and out of pocket. In a weak moment I told the girl friend I had bought back near the bottom.

I recall that in the wicked days of Coolidge and Hoover the market went up on bad news, but then I thought the SEC had undertaken to improve things. I also remembered that J. P. Morgan or some of his crowd had said "Never sell America short." But I thought we had gotten rid of Morgan and his crowd with the help of the New Deal and the SEC. What good is the SEC if I lose when I am right?

I would write to Jerome Frank and ask him about this, but I would rather ask you to ask him to answer in this column, knowing your limitation of space for any one letter. I have also thought of writing to Marriner Eccles because the Federal Reserve Board has something to do with regulating speculation in the stock market; but I prefer to have you ask him for the same reason.

My problem is this: Should I buy and take my loss now? Should I tell my girl friend the whole truth and that she can't have the birthday present, or should I give her the birthday present as though I were a winner and then pinch myself on cigarettes and lunch the rest of the year to make up for it?

If you can get the answer to these questions from the Government officials and Mary Haworth, I hope you will let me know soon, because I must have some rest. I cannot go on like this much longer.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

The President's Latest Move

THE EXPLANATION OF the President's move in sending Sumner Welles to Europe, together with Cordell Hull's statement of "undertakings with the neutrals with a view to a sound and lasting peace," is to be found, I believe, chiefly in the United States and in the Presidential campaign, and only secondarily in Europe.

MISS THOMPSON

The 1940 Presidential campaign is extremely dull so far. The war in Europe has pushed domestic affairs into the background. The strongest card that the President has in the campaign is his foreign policy, and the strongest argument that can be advanced for a third term, or for a Democratic candidate of Mr. Roosevelt's own choice is the advisability of continuity in foreign policy.

Mr. Welles' "Secret" Mission — secret diplomacy openly arrived at—suggests no positive action; it does suggest continuing action.

At the same time Mr. Hull's statement indicates that the visit of Mr. Welles is not concerned with entangling us in the war, but rather with preparations for peace. That is also good campaign material.

Mr. Roosevelt knows as well as any other person that no such peace can be made as long as two men hold the power that they do, at present, in the world. There can be no peace except on the basis of the distribution of power. There will be no possibility of continuing peace as long as Hitler and Stalin can let loose whatever forces they choose whenever they choose.

Hitler's mania let loose this war, and Europe cannot and will not make peace with Hitler.

Governments might be willing to do so, but the price they would pay would be popular revolt at home. Before there is real peace Stalin must retire to Russia and Germany must have a government capable of participating in a conference. Germany's present government is not. And everybody knows that—the neutrals as well as the Allied belligerents.

Mussolini's Power Is Held Diminishing Through Italy

MUSSOLINI IS IN a different position. His power in Italy is already considerably diminished. His friend Hitler and Hitler's henchman Ribbentrop betrayed Mussolini in a really gangster way on the Russian deal.

Mr. Roosevelt certainly wants the United States to have something to say about the form of political and economic organization that eventually emerges in Europe.

Mr. Welles' mission may be somewhat embarrassing to all the belligerents. For if Hitler can state any peace terms that do not add up to German hegemony over Europe, he will be a more fearful and wonderful liar than ever.

The northern neutrals have constructive and reasonable ideas for a reorganization of Europe in which their way of life could go on, and the United States is thus, in advance, suggesting that their views should be consulted.

IF, HOWEVER, THE President's move is interpreted as a big peace offensive, in behalf of immediate armistice and negotiation, that will be most unfortunate. For such a mission now would have the nature of a Runciman mission. An armistice at this moment could only serve the Nazis and the Stalinists, as Runciman served Hitler's program in Czecho-Slovakia.

Hitler is in a desperate situation. Peace talk is in the air everywhere, and that peace talk emanates from Germany and nowhere else.

The present Nazi-Communist war of nerves is being fought around the slogan of peace. On the one hand, conservatives are warned that unless there is an armistice right away Hitler will turn Germany over to the Bolshevists, all civilization will collapse, and in a great Nibelungen holocaust Hitler will pull down the whole structure of society.

A NUMBER OF apologists for armistice now, among them some whose personal and financial interests are directly involved, have lately been seeing the President and have pictured Germany as very strong. Through them and others a curious defeatism is being spread about in this country that the Nazi-Bolshevist combination is invincible and that some one like the President had better step in and pull out the best possible peace for the rest of Europe.

No information that this column is able to get from reliable and disinterested sources in Europe—and from neutral countries, at that—indicates anything of the kind. Germany hesitates to attack on a large scale because her generals and her economists know that she runs the serious risk of being beaten in the very first stage of an offensive. The morale of the people is indescribably low. Even should the Russians succeed in Finland—as they certainly may—that fact would be of dubious help to Hitler. The German people are pro-Finnish, not pro-Stalin.

A little common sense and a little more confidence in democracy and free government would make Americans realize that tyranny, Gestapo rule, military socialism and government by a clique of racketeers topped by a psychopath are not an efficient combination.

HENCE HIS PEACE offensive. Hence the constant attempt to turn all who oppose him into "war mongers." Hence the gentlemen from Germany who say that unless this war is stopped immediately, it will mean "the end of capitalism"—a line of talk that capitalists, who are notoriously timid souls and not always very bright, rush to accept. For, it is true, this so-called "imperialist war" is harder on capitalism than any previous war. But a peace that leaves the unprincipled crowd in power who have brought Europe to this condition would be even harder on capitalism and harder on civilization, human freedom and general decency as well. Mr. Stalin is also carrying on a peace offensive, in the international war of nerves, while Hitler's right bower tries to blackmail the world with the threat of Russia—which is no threat to anyone except as Hitler makes it so, because Russia is too weak to be a threat! And the combination of two deathly weaknesses does not make power.

People Of U. S. Must Leave Hiding Place Under The Bed

AS FAR AS I CAN see, the only place where the German war of nerves is working is in the United States, where there is a panic among certain members of the so-called intelligentsia which is really amazing. They are desperately fighting to keep us out of the last war, with their eyes completely closed to the very different nature of this war from every viewpoint, and are pushing for an armistice and peace, regardless of whether there is the slightest possibility that such a move at this time will bring anything except further confusion and chaos, all because they fear that "if the war continues our boys will have to fight in France."

Nobody has asked us to fight in France, and to save my life I cannot see where we would go to fight. A neutrality benevolent in the economic field to the northern neutrals and to the Allies is wholly in the interests of the United States and will contribute to the rapid and reasonable conclusion of the war. A vivid interest in the eventual reorganization of Europe is wholly in the interest of the United States and may turn out to be very much in the interest of Germany, once that country has been released from its psychopathic jailers.

The people of the United States should come out from under the bed and look around. This is a very interesting and very challenging world.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Press—A Mirror

MOST OF MY LETTERS from members of Father Coughlin's love-lobby chide the American press for failure to do right by Gen. Franco during the Spanish civil war, the principal complaint being that the news matter and editorial comment were not properly aghast at the atrocities of the Loyalists against priests and nuns and the desecration of holy things in the early days. This is intended to suggest that the American press was in sympathy with the Communists, it being held, as though there could be no argument about it, that the Loyalist side was purely communistic, with no discount.

There is no need to rely on opinion, for the files will show that the atrocities were reported in the papers and that they were editorially deplored. It is my impression, however, that they caused less shock than the persecutions of the Jews of Germany, particularly the terror that followed the retributive killing of a Nazi attache of the German embassy in Paris. It occurred to me then that we were raising a great-to-do over a debauch consisting mainly of burning and looting and the confiscation of money, attended by comparatively little bloodshed, and I put this down to the fact that the world had had an exaggerated opinion of the intelligence and character of the Nazis. The disgust was aggravated by the announcement of Joseph Goebbels that this revolting exhibition was but a healthy expression of the true German spirit. The world stubbornly expected better than this from the great German people.

Both Sides Used Horrible Means

IN SPAIN there was a difference. In the first place, the horrors occurred in the mad early days of a complete civil war, and were by no means unilateral, as the diplomats say. They were bilateral or reciprocal, and, moreover, Franco was using Mohammedans and later used Italians and Germans to attack his own people. He attacked the government, and he was identified with the church. We have learned, too, from Catholic authority that vast numbers of ignorant Spaniards had learned to hate the church during a time when the church authorities had a duty to serve them.

Of course, the Communists whipped up the fury of the masses of apostate Spaniards, and I am one who never allowed personal attacks on Bill Carney, of the New York Times, by the evil Communist journalistic claque to impair my belief in the expose of Communist influence in Madrid, which he published after he bailed out of the capital and before he was assigned to Franco's army. I believe he told the truth and that the Communists of Russia ran the government after the war began, but have no opinion as to whether they were in control before the revolution broke. The intricacies of Spanish politics are such that the American public simply can't have an intelligent opinion on that.

Nazis Now Engaged In Cold-Blooded Work

BUT IN VIEW of the attacks of the Communists on the American press and in view of the capitalistic nature of the publishing industry in the United States, it seems absurd to say that the American newspapers ever favored the Loyalists as Communists. Sympathy there may have been for democracy in Spain, and it will be remembered that Fascism and Nazism, both terribly abhorrent to Americans, were on Franco's side. Now the same Nazis who were crusaders with Franco are engaged in the cold-blooded work, or perhaps it might better be called play—for cruelty seems to give them joy—of annihilating the whole Polish nation.

They are slaughtering priests and defiling sacred places and objects, and, for the special torture of this religious people, "even girls, especially the good looking ones, are being deported to Germany, to the despair of their families," as Cardinal Hlond's report says. So we were right about the Nazis all the time.

U. S. Press Displays Hatred Of Horrors

INCIDENTALLY, although the Communists circulated photographs of rows of bodies of children who were said to have been killed by Franco's bombs, the same Communists now applaud the slaughter of Finnish civilians, including any children who might be in the way, by Stalin's planes. They also attempt to discredit as fakes the pictures sent back by American photographers on the ground. All this is just as well, for they have no influence except to convince people that the Communist is vile beyond description.

By now the world is so inured to atrocity that even Cardinal Hlond's report has received less after-comment than the Nazi pogrom. The world has learned to expect nothing but the worst from the German nation whenever it has strength to persecute and ravish, but the American press has followed a fairly straight line all the way. Our papers have reported the news to the best of their ability—which, incidentally, is of the best—and our editorial opinion consistently has hated the foul horrors perpetrated by both Communism and Fascism, including the Loyalist slaughters and the sanctimonious butcheries of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Infinitesimal Chance

By Ernest K. Lindley

Welles' Exploratory Peace Trip

THE CHANCES that Sumner Welles will find even a toe-hold for an effort to stop the European war may not be more than 1 in 100 or 1 in 1,000. Nothing is lost from exploring the possibilities. If the chances of success were only 1 in 1,000,000, the attempt would be worth making. At least, Welles will obtain and digest important information which may be of value later.

LINDLEY

More than three weeks ago this column predicted that before March 1 the President would take steps looking toward the pacification of Europe. Unless it is stopped soon, the Nazi-British-French war almost certainly will spread over almost all Europe. All three of these belligerents have shown signs of becoming increasingly restless. For weeks important events have been predicted for early March. Once this war becomes a total war, once it begins to be fought furiously, once the casualties and the damage begin to mount, it will almost certainly become impossible to stop until one side or the other is shattered or both are exhausted.

Then there is the second European war, the Russo-Finnish war, in which this country's sympathies are so sharply engaged. This war and the other European war have not yet become amalgamated. The Nazis significantly have denied that they are giving the Russians assistance. They could not be happy over either the prolongation of the Russo-Finnish war or over a Russian conquest of Finland.

Thirdly, of course, is the Far Eastern war. As long as it endures there is danger that we will become involved. If the European war could be stopped, releasing part of the Anglo-French naval strength for service, we would no longer be in danger of "holding the bag" for the western powers in the Far East.

If the Nazi-British-French war could be stopped soon, Finland probably could be saved, and in due time a reasonable Far Eastern settlement might be worked out. There is no thought in the Administration, however, that a mere truce in the big western war would accomplish anything worth while.

Crevice to Peace Path Sought

IN THE WORDS of one of the President's advisers: "Europe cannot be saved unless certain constructive forces are liberated. These cannot be liberated by a mere pause in the hostilities. On the other hand, they may be completely extinguished if the war is fought over a long period."

In the last several weeks there has been a shift in emphasis in the thought emanating from the White House. Formerly the emphasis was on the impossibility of working for a reasonable European peace so long as the Nazis rule Germany. Lately the emphasis has been more on the improbability of obtaining a reasonable peace after a long and costly war, even though the Allies win.

The President therefore has decided to explore the European surface to see if there is any service which might open the way to peace, in contradistinction to a mere truce. Any peace that the Allies would consider at this stage would have to include, it is taken for granted, the restoration of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia as independent states. It would require that the Nazis renounce imperial ambitions. It would therefore require a reduction in armaments.

The President has no peace formula beyond a few high-sounding generalities. When he goes abroad Sumner Welles will not carry with him any proposals. His visit will be exploratory.

The selection of Welles is, however, the best evidence that the President is moved by the utmost sincerity. Welles is our ablest diplomat. Correct and cool in manner, he has a quick, accurate mind. His experience abroad has been chiefly in Latin-American affairs. He has been the real manager of our Pan-American "good neighbor" policy, the most successful phase of Roosevelt's foreign policy. But he is well informed about Europe, and better equipped than any other man we have to cope with the professional diplomats of the European foreign offices.

Discreet Welles Has Cool Head

WELLES' COLD, straight thinking has been an invaluable check on the emotional impulses of both the President and Secretary Hull. He is trusted by the President. He is also thoroughly discreet—almost the diametric opposite of Col. House, the gullible amateur chosen by President Wilson to make rounds of European capitals. Welles is too experienced to be taken into camp by the British Foreign Office.

While Welles has been called upon, in the line of official duty, to rebuff severely representations made by the Nazi government, at least two of his public utterances should assure that he will be received with confidence in Germany. He has proclaimed publicly that the Treaty of Versailles was unjust. And in May, 1938, he said, in a speech in Baltimore, that "the cause of world peace and the fundamental objective in our foreign policy of keeping our own country at peace are not furthered by our participation in international politics." This followed one of Harold Ickes' diatribes against the Nazis. Welles' unimpeachable advice was not followed by the President, who later broke diplomatic relations with Germany over a question which was purely one of internal German policy. But it may serve Welles in good stead during this mission.

The first aim of the Welles mission—an appraisal of the European scene by a cool head—will not fail. The second, contingent, purpose—a move for peace—may not materialize. But if it should, both the President and Welles would go down in history as great world figures.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Rough Guy" Goes

Civic Virtue, the statue in City Hall Park, New York, familiar to all visitors to the metropolis, is to be transferred to a new beat. Park Commissioner Moses has made up his mind. Old "Rough Guy," as the statue has been known, has survived criticism, ridicule and threats for a quarter of a century, but, as the couplet goes:

Man proposes,
But Moses disposes.

This department is sorry. The statue had its faults, but there are worse ones all over Manhattan. It was a victim of its name. A statue called "Civic Virtue" two jumps from a city hall in a modern metropolis anywhere! It was doomed from the first.

Nobody ever seemed to understand it. It was supposed to depict honor crushing to earth crookedness, corruption and the kindred political vices. But to many spectators it looked like a member of the freshmen eleven, deprived of his clothes, making a heel of himself on ladies' day at a Turkish bath. To others it seemed to portray a fat life guard demonstrating the approved New York method of getting a seat in a subway.

There he was, a big, plump, curly-haired athlete, club in hand, walking all over the prostrate forms of a half dozen prostrate women without as much as a "pardon my feet!"

It may have been his facial expression that annoyed the spectators. It showed no concern whatever. You could study the "Rough Guy's" features all day long without getting the slightest idea whether he was just looking for a fourth at bridge.

There wasn't in his face even that sternness one finds on the map of a man who has missed "bingo" by one number.

He seemed so jaunty about the whole civic virtue business. There was no escaping the feeling that he would throw down his club and grab a tennis racquet at the first suggestion, apologizing to the ladies beneath his "dogs" and explaining that he was a stranger there himself.

Where to put him is the problem. This department suggests that he be moved to the Young Men's Republican Club and re-christened "The White Knight of Owosso Crushing the Democrats to Earth." He might be placed at the foot of Wall street and labeled "The Spirit of the SEC."

Or even placed in one of Mr. Moses' super-parks as "Moses Giving His Critics the Works."

Anyhow, be as nice as possible, "The Rough Guy" had two strikes on him before he was dedicated.

Over There

In Search Of Peace

By Barnet Nover

Belligerents Vs. Neutrals

TO THE NEUTRALS of Europe the danger which today threatens their safety, indeed their very existence, will continue to haunt them as long as war rages on the crowded continent which they inhabit.

The major belligerents went into the war, if not eagerly, at least not unwillingly. They knew what they were doing and were prepared to risk the consequences. Had they so desired, they could have stayed out. They willed otherwise.

NOVER

Europe's neutrals, particularly the small neutrals on the edge of the conflict, have no such choice between action and inaction, between going to war and remaining at peace. They want desperately to remain at peace. They are doing everything possible to stay out of war. But, in the last analysis, it is not they who will have the final word. The choice will be made for them by the belligerents.

IT IS OBVIOUS, for instance, that whether Sweden becomes a belligerent or remains a neutral depends not on what the Swedes want but on what Stalin or Hitler wills. Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Rumania, are faced by a comparable situation.

Those nations will defend themselves if they are attacked. Thus, if they go to war it will be because they are forced into it.

No Peace As Dangerous To Them As Present War

EVERY RUMOR OF PEACE is almost immediately given wide circulation in neutral European countries. For, as those countries see it, no peace could be as dangerous to them as the present war.

This does not mean that they favor the kind of peace terms which Hitler presented at the point of a bayonet on October 6. They would prefer a speedy Allied victory to a peace that would mean the perpetuation of the present status in Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

For very different reasons, Italy, which by her own definition is not a neutral but a "nonbelligerent," feels the same way about an immediate peace. Not only does Italy want to stay out of the war, she also fears an Allied victory. It is only at the expense of the Allies that Italian ambitions can be satisfied.

IN CONTRADISTINCTION to this neutral position is the attitude of Great Britain and France. The Allies are convinced that even a war of indefinite duration is preferable to the re-establishment of the kind of peace that obtained before the present conflict began.

Indeed, when they say they are fighting "Hitlerism" what they mean above everything else is that they are fighting to put an end to that cycle of unceasing aggressions which marked the so-called peace of Europe for some years before 1939.

U. S. Clarifies Its Position As Factor In Reconstruction

THE ALLIES are not ruling out a negotiated peace. But they are convinced that no good end would be served by negotiating with Hitler. They are not forgetting the lessons of Munich.

Under the circumstances, the hope of immediate peace remains extremely slim. The Allies are not prepared to entertain any mediatory offers the result of which would be only a new and uncertain truce. The neutrals are in no position to compel the Allies and Germany to make peace. And there appears not the slightest immediate prospect of a change in the Reich that would make possible a negotiated settlement with a Germany which the British and French governments would consider a fit member of the European family of nations.

IT IS HARDLY surprising, then, that while Rome applauded, Paris and London greeted the news of the proposed fact-finding tour of Undersecretary Welles with unfeigned alarm. The impression apparently created in those capitals by the White House announcement, coupled as it was with Secretary Hull's disclosure that the United States was in consultation with European nations regarding certain questions likely to arise at the end of the war, was that an American peace move was in the offing.

That impression has now been dissipated. In a statement clarifying the Administration's position, Secretary Hull has emphasized that the current consultations with European neutrals do not involve any search for immediate peace in Europe, but look forward beyond the conflict to that peace which will follow.

Certainly such inquiry is very much in order and cannot be undertaken too soon, regardless of how remote the end of the war may be. If the neutrals find themselves largely helpless today they may be able to play a significant role when the fighting ends and the task of reconstruction has to be undertaken. If given the will to do so, no country can render greater constructive service in that endeavor than the United States.

Prize Winning Photographs

These two pictures are among the prize winners in the contest of the Agriculture Camera Club, made up of amateur photographers in the Agriculture Department. "Calla Lillies" is the work of Lilian A. Guernsey, of Beltsville, Md., and "The Timber Scaler" is a photograph by Bluford W. Muir, both first place in their class. The photos are part of an exhibit in the patio of Agriculture's administration building

Tempest in Teapot Is Resolved into Tranquility

Luise Rainer Stars in Civic's 'Saint Joan;' Tallulah Bankhead Holds Court Backstage; This, That and the Other About the Theater

DIGGING OUT FROM UNDER: Lee D. Butler, president of the Washington Civic Theater, now makes definite announcement that Luise Rainer, twice winner of the highest award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, will appear in the Red Cross benefit production of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," the week of Sunday, March 3, in the Belasco Theater . . . A gala premiere will be celebrated on the Sunday opening night . . . This finest of the Shaw plays will be presented through March 9, with two matinees scheduled . . . Rehearsals are well under way, under the supervision of Erwin Piscator, guest director, and Day Tuttle, director of the Civic Theater . . . That tempest in a teapot turned out to be only a cyclone in a salt cellar! . . . Official motion pictures of the Joe Louis-Arturo Godoy brawl, in Madison Square Garden Friday night, are on view at the Arcade Theater in Hyattsville, Md., noon to midnight . . . One-week engagement began yesterday . . . Ed Cloten, director of the Blackfriars production of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," is holding tryouts for the play at 2115 Fifteenth street northwest, tomorrow and Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. . . . Membership in the Guild is not essential to participation and possible selection for a place in the cast . . . After two shoe-horn weeks at the Earle, "The Fighting 69th" now is rifling, hand-grenading and trench-bombing the enemy and the local gentry into further surrender on the screen at the Metropolitan . . . Opened Saturday for a third downtown week of explosive—and comic—dramatics . . . Jim Cagney, George Brent, Pat O'Brien, Alan Hale, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh, Dennis Morgan, Dick Foran, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, John Litel, Henry O'Neill and Sammy Cohen are the head men in the all-male cast . . . Third week—as goes without saying—for "Gone With the Wind," at Loew's Palace . . . Never mind those long box-office lines for the morning and afternoon unreserved performances . . . There are still seats . . . The Palace has a capacity of approximately 2,400 . . . A line that long would reach from here to there, multiplied by anything you like . . . Miss Lansing Hall, of the Washington Civic Theater, is chairman of the theatrical collections committee of the Finnish Relief Fund . . . She will be in charge of the "Help Finland Days" in the local citadels of the celluloids on February 17 and 18 . . . With the blessing of Tallulah Bankhead, daughter of the Speaker of the House, who Saturday night concluded her week's engagement in "The Little Foxes," at the National Theater . . . "Taloo" is burning with zeal for the Finns . . . As who is not?

Miss Bankhead's toughest performance, incidentally, is the one in her dressing room that follows the fall of the final curtain on "The Little Foxes." Fifteen minutes backstage Saturday night sounded something like this: "Oh, hello, Senator, I sent you a telegram this afternoon thanking you for putting me in the Congressional Record . . . (Sotto voce tip) This isn't the Senator, this is Nelson Bell, of The Post . . . Of course, darling, I'm a little twisted . . . Remember when we sat through the matinee of 'Save Me the Waltz,' the Catherine Dayton play, with John in it? . . . Good evening, Major, if you'll just go over and fight for the Finns, I'll go along as your mascot . . . Good evening Mrs. Whosis, you know all of these charming people, of course . . . (Mrs. Whosis knows none of them) . . . Sign it? Of course I'll sign it. Where? Oh, of course . . . Oh, darling, how glad I am to see you and how sweet of you to come back . . . Oh, Senator, here you are at last . . . So good of you to put me in the Congressional Record . . . Certainly I remember you . . . You wrote me the letter . . . No? . . . Oh, yes, you are the man . . . No? . . . I'm awfully stupid . . . Sign it? But, of course . . . Where? . . . Here? . . . All right . . . Has anyone a pen that will write? . . . Oh, good evening, Mr. Whatsyourname, so good of you to come back . . . and you, Biff! . . . Remember when you poured John on the train at Birmingham? . . . No, you can't see me to the train tonight . . . Daddy's down with the flu and I'm staying over with him . . . Stick around, Nels, and have a drink . . . This can't go on forever . . . You've had the grippe, too? . . . So sorry . . . So've I . . . Nothing catching . . . On the cheek, maybe? . . . 'Bye, darling, I'll be coming back sometime . . . Maybe we can have a talk . . . Sign it? . . . Of course I will . . . So good of you to ask . . . Has anyone a pen that will write? . . . Mrs. Blanko! . . . How good of you! . . . Sign it . . . But, of course . . .

And so on, far into the night.

Katharine Brush, nationally famous novelist, magazine writer and scenarist, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to write an original story for the next Judge Hardy Family film. It should not be overlooked that the Hardy Family pictures are the ones that did more than anything else to make Mickey Rooney the No. 1 box-office man of the cinema. They haven't hurt Lewis S. Stone, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford, Sara Haden, Judy Garland and some of the other on the M-G-M lot, either.

An Old Classic Is Brought to the Screen

Finns Continue To Dominate Trans-Lux Bill

The valiant Finns must continue to be given top place in the European newsreel section, as the latest pictures of this army in the snow are shown at the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week.

So far as the short subjects are concerned, "Information Please," No. 3, in the popular series, gets No. 1 vote.

Mass bombing of China by more than 100 Japanese bombers, refreshes our memory on the subject of undeclared war in the Far East. Back to the States, we find the United States Coast Guard breaking the ice off Cape Cod and repairing icebound buoys. At a cost of $700 a day, the crew of the scuttled German liner Columbus enjoy United States chow, at Angel Island off the coast of California. Postmaster General Farley announces Chicago for the Democratic convention, and Chairman Dies is cleared in the Pelley letter charges.

Sports are well covered from sled dog races in New Hampshire, plus Pacific Northwest ski jumping, to excellent Olympic diving in Florida, and the lady jockey's derby at Agua Caliente.

"Men of the Alps" is beautifully screened, with excellent instructive material. "Screen Snapshots" covers a pleasant visit through the Hollywood studios. Disney offers "The Ugly Duckling," rounding out 75 minutes of excellent entertainment.

Howard

Rhythm reigns on the stage of the Howard Theater where radio's Four Ink Spots are kings for the week, and headline a rollicking revue. Teddy Hill and his rhythmeers plus Pegleg Bates, and a score of performers, aid and abet in the footlight fracas.

The Ink Spots easily top the show in their entertainment task, pleasing with "Ole King Cole," "Undecided," their original record arrangement of "My Prayer," and the famous favorite that made them, "If I Didn't Care." Teddy Hill and his sizzling lads were in for their share of spotlight, handling a group of warm tunes such as "Honeysuckle Rose," "I Thought About You," and two of their own making, "Wham" and "Swinging at Seventh and T." Songstress Bootsie Garrison clicked with "What's New."

Terrific is a good word for Pegleg Bates, the unique dancing star who brought down a solid house with his speedy stepping on one agile foot and a wooden pin. Reds and Curley, proved a versatile pair of tan boys with plenty on the hoof, while Mason and Vigal, comedians, and soubrette Deannie Larry did their entertainment chores capably.

On the screen, Jane Wyman and Dick Foran appears in "Private Detective," a film story of a detective sergeant and his nosey fiancee, who finally unravel a murder mystery. The entire program will be given a gala midnight performance tonight.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 11.

FINANCE DEPT.: The American Civil Liberties Union recently received a $500 contribution from an advertising agency. The accompanying letter stated merely that the payment was made at the request of Alexander Woollcott . . . Woollcott had posed for an ad indorsing Pullman travel. The Pullman company pay $500 for these indorsements. It will not give the money to the endorser, but will pay it to any charity he designates . . . And so Woollcott designated the American Civil Liberties Union, among whose many battles is one for equal rights, to members of all races and creeds in securing Pullman reservations.

SPORTS DEPT.: Lester Rodney, sports editor of the Daily Worker, attended the party given by Herbert Hoover's Sports Committee for Finnish Relief . . . Rodney was embarrassed by the jibes of his colleagues, who wondered at the presence of a Communist writer at a function for the benefit of Finland . . . "But I warn you, Mr. Hoover," Rodney said, "you will be on a spot, if those Finnish soldiers win" . . . "And why?" asked Hoover . . . "Because what will you do," replied Rodney, "when they start coming to you for a bonus?"

SCHOOL DEPT.: Albert Einstein related to some of his friends the story of his meeting with Somerset Maugham last year . . . Throughout Maugham's visit, the Britisher seemed uncomfortable, and Einstein asked him why . . . "Not until I shook hands with you," explained Maugham, "did I remember that I'd flunked mathematics at school."

BUSINESS DEPT.: In Hollywood last week, General Consul Myers, representing Allied Exhibitors, sponsor of the Neely Bill, addressed a meeting there and argued in favor of the bill . . . Walter Wanger challenged Section IV of that bill, declaring that it would be a governmental weapon for consorship. . . . Myers then discussed censorship, and told the audience that John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" and "The Grapes of Wrath" were obscene and profane stories. He was startled by the hissing . . . "This," Sheridan Gibney reminded him, "is a meeting of the Screen Writers Guild."

BOOK DEPT.: Hendrik Willem van Loon has postponed the completion of his new book, which is to be called "The Average Man." Van Loon is devoting his time, instead, for the Finnish Relief Fund . . . "But what about your book, 'The Average Man,'" his publisher pleaded . . . "The Average Man," said Van Loon, "these days needs bullets and bread—not books."

LOCAL NEWS: Ed Wynn has found the title for his new show. He'll call it "The Funnies" . . . Jed Harris has returned to Broadway . . . Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy will be on his way to Arizona shortly . . . Sinclair Lewis, the actor, has been suggested for the leading role in the new Dorothy Thompson-Fitz Kortner play . . . Paul Robeson's recent statements concerning Russia and Finland already have cost him three concert engagements. A representative of three music groups arrived in N. Y. the day after Robeson's statemen was published, read it, and returned the three advance checks he was bringing.

MOVIES DEPT.: George Coulourus, the Mercury Theater actor, arrived in Hollywood recently, but could get no cooperation from the film studio . . . He finally called one of the department heads, and said: "This is Coulourus" . . . The official asked him to repeat his name, and George did . . . "Coulourus?" he asked. "Is that your first or second name?" . . . "First name," Coulourus exploded. "My second name is 'del Rio.'"

POLITICS: Commissioner Wilson, of the department of housing and buildings, lectured before a group of women last week, and told them how he had cleaned up his department, and removed every semblance of graft . . . On the way home, Wilson drove down Eleventh avenue and noticed a violation at a gas station. He stopped his car, walked to the attendant, and announced: "I'm from the building department" . . . "I'm sorry, but the manager isn't here now," said the attendant, "and he's the one who takes care of the building department men."

SOCIAL NOTES: John Farrar, the publisher, was reminiscing of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, and told of the time when a loquacious host talked incessantly for more than an hour—interrupted only by Mrs. Campbell's muttering "Blup" . . . The host continued talking, and again Mrs. Campbell said "Blup" . . . "Blue? Blup?" asked the host "What does 'Blup' mean?" . . . "'Blup,' was the answer, "means 'a word in edgewise.'"

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 11 (INS).—A cast to end all big casts is the plan for "Boom Town!" Read this line-up and see if you don't think it is one producers dream about but seldom achieve. Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr—each one a star in his own name—are all set for this precedent-setting movie. I suppose, in putting all this money in one picture M-G-M reckoned that "Gone With the Wind" has done such big things at the box office that it pays to do things in a big way.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"Boom Town" goes into production March 15, with Jack Conway directing and Sam Zimbalist producing. So you see it is not just one of those ifs, ands or maybes, but a reality. The story is that of a Texas oil field and it has been made into a highly dramatic movie by John Lee Mahin, who adapted James Edward Grant's original story.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Joan Crawford and Lee Bowman are enjoying each other's company these February evenings . . . That boy Jimmy Stewart certainly does get around. Saw him at the "Little Hungary" with Ilona Massey . . . Who was the brunette with Eddie Moran at Slapsie Maxie's? No one seems to know her . . . Claudia Morgan, Ralph's pretty daughter, has a part in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . Sonja Levien and Carl Hovey are entertaining Wednesday in honor of Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor . . . Rosalind Russell, who had a minor operation, went home today . . . James Cagney returned home from Martin's Vineyard today, a day ahead of schedule . . . Louise Stanley and Jack (Addison) Randall flew in from Yuma, just in time for the Duncan McMartin party, which was really fun. Everyone was there.

Sir Alfred Duff Cooper and his wife, the former Lady Diana Manners, return March 15 to be Countess Di Frasso's house guests. Hollywood will have a chance to hear him lecture, for he is booked here March 19 . . . The Charles Boyers and the Ronald Colmans, a colorful foursome at the Hollywood Derby . . . Mrs. Ria Gable has been very sick with a bad case of flu . . . Frances Farmer, who has been reported as carrying the torch for Clifford Odets, certainly didn't act the part at the Hollywood Derby, where she was the gayest member of a large party . . . C. S. Forrester, author of "Captain Horatio Hornblower," has been commissioned to write the script for Errol Flynn . . . John Garfield leaves tomorrow to join Mrs. Garfield in New York. He will remain until after the baby is born. . . . Robert Z. Leonard is celebrating his sixteenth year at M-G-M.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Gayety

The Gayety this week is presenting Zorita and Marlene, two of the season's sensations, and Tommy "Bozo" Snyder, one of burlesque's finest comedians and a grand trouper.

The dazzling Zorita offers musical specialities, minus her pet snake, but nevertheless we can assure you her routines are novel, as usual, and certainly sensational. Her "Dance of Passion" is about the most daring number we've ever seen on the Gayety stage.

Marlene, more beautiful and stately than ever, presents several beauty parades executed in her own inimitable manner. A newcomer on the circuit, this shapely miss has a great future if she receives the proper exploitation and is able to maintain the fast pace she has achieved in burlesque at this early stage of her career.

Tommy "Bozo" Snyder remains, in our humble opinion, one of the finest comedians who ever played this theater and certainly one of the greatest masters of pantomine in show business. Snyder, capably assisted by Murray Briscoe, offers several new sketches and also offers his drum and trombone novelty, which is very, very funny.

Although a veteran in show business, Leonard Kramer was some little time in discovering he was an even better comedian than straight man. Happily, Mr. Kramer now specializes in some good comedy efforts under the very apt name of "Nick, the Greek."

Aside from Zorita and shapely Marlene, the distaff portion of the bill has some excellent acrobatic and toe dancing by Reggie Du-Van and fine performances by Joy St. Claire and Diane King, in the song-and-dance line.

The cast of this well-balanced bill also includes the vocal Les Golden, Harry Reed and a chorus of youthful and pretty girls whose musical routines are colorful and a credit to their producer, Miss Kitty Parker.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 11.

Turn-about is fair play. So thinks Laurence Olivier'anent his Romeo and Juliet tour with Vivien Leigh, for he's trying to round up a complete American cast. As he said to me the other day: "Your country's been very good to us. And I see no reason why we shouldn't use as many of your people as we can." Vivien Leigh says she's pretty frightened about the whole venture, because she's never played Juliet and they'll only have three weeks rehearsals before opening in San Francisco. They'll tour four weeks before New York. And have to be back for picture commitments sometime in August. It's quite amazing that these two have been able to arrange this. Because when John Garfield and Eddie Albert wanted to return to Broadway, their studios wouldn't allow it. Now after a year and a half Garfield is headed for Broadway. I'll take my hat off to these two who know what they want, and are getting it.

HOPPER

Greer Garson was a vision of old-fashioned loveliness in the "Pride and Prejudice" costumes. She said it was such a sudden switch after having three skin-tight modern gowns fitted for "Susan and God" which she was first slated to play, to peel off the onion-skin gowns, lace herself into a corset and blossom in crinoline.

And if you can find a prettier old-fashioned bonquet than Maureen O'Sullivan, Ann Rutherford, Karen Morley and Heather Angel, I'd like to see it.

Marjorie Wood, who has a good part in the picture, told me how she got it, which is so nice I'm going to pass it on. Marjorie, one of the really fine actresses of Broadway hadn't been getting the breaks out here and was ready to leave for New York, when she ran into George Cukor. He said, "Now put on your prettiest frock, go and call on Hunt Stromberg and I'm sure you'll get such-and-such a part." She did, and in the middle of the interview, Mr. Stromberg said: "Well, the part is yours. I couldn't have turned you down, had I wanted to. Because George Cukor is listening in the next room."

When I saw Director Bob Leonard balancing a teacup on his lap, he said, "Oh, please, Hedda, don't call me a sissy. But we've so many English in the picture that they've got me drinking tea. And confidentially, I like it."

Incidentally, shortly, Cecil B. DeMille will have a little competition, because Bob, who has some pretty dulcet tones of his own, is going on the new Metro program, which from what I hear is going to be but sensational . . .

MERLE OBERON demonstrates proper Hollywood costume when one wishes to pluck a rose. She will be seen next with Pat O'Brien and George Brent in "We Shall Meet Again"

Bright, Gay Party at Egypt's Legation Marks King's Twenty-First Birthday

Shoals of Notables Attend Reception To Join Envoys in Toast to Farouk; New Italian Attache Is Introduced

By Carolyn Bell

Things were merry in Cairo, Egypt, yesterday, where the populace celebrated the twenty-first birthday of handsome King Farouk, but Washingtonians, not to be outdone, toasted the King's health, too. It was tremendous, this party which the Egyptian Minister and his chic wife, Mme. Hassan, gave from 4:30 until 6:30 o'clock.

Twilight found a solid line of cars winding their way about Sheridan Circle and on up the drive. A green flag, with crescent and star, was flying from the legation and trusty William was on hand to assist milady from her car. In other words, the affair had all the earmarks of a typical Washington party.

Although the reception started earlier than usual, guests were still arriving at 6:30 o'clock and it must have been well after that before they left. The Minister and Mme. Hassan received in the upstairs salon, she smartly turned out in a beige crepe frock with ruching on the short sleeves. Her hair was sleekly coiffured, as always. Several brilliants at the neckline completed the ensemble.

Three large rooms were "in use" yesterday afternoon and they were literally jammed to the doors. The Ambassador of Italy and Princess Colonna were early arrivals. Tall and dark, the princess had donned a black frock, shot with silver, and a small black tricorne hat covered with veiling. They were busy introducing the new Naval Attache, Admiral Alberto Lais, who has just arrived here. Diplomats were as thick as peas and noticed here and there were Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy, with a snatch of bright red velvet accenting her black costume; the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi, the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero, she wearing an embroidered turquoise wool jacket over her frock, and the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi. Not far away was Miss Sibilla Skidelsky with a soft pink felt hat perched jauntily on her head.

Portraits Seen Of Egypt's Kings

The salon, where the hosts received, has several interesting portraits. Most dominating of these is an almost life-size oil of the last Khedive. A large photograph of King Farouk stands on a nearby table. The room is done in pastel shades with beige-tinted walls, lemon damask drape and crystal chandeliers. Here a vast amount of champagne was dispensed and the attaches of the legation were busy seeing that everyone had a full glass. Immaculately garbed Anwar Niazi and Ali Foad Toulba were dashing hither and thither, acting as hosts.

A punch was served in the adjoining salon, and here were glimpsed a group of State Department people, including the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, she in a deep turquoise frock, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward. Not far away were Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson. Mrs. Pierson was sportily attired in a ribbed wool reefer and brown hat. Others there included Mrs. Emil Hurja, whose snood bore several bright flowers; Senator and Mrs. William D. King, Senator Arthur Capper Baroness von Pagenhardt, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Freer, Mrs. Peter Drury and Mrs. Ralph Brewster.

The enormous buffet table in the dining room was indeed something to behold. Centered with an artistic bouquet of iris and white lilies, the table was laden with a feast fit for a king. Huge mounds of salads (several varieties), turkeys, hams and sandwiches were to be had.

Mrs. Culbertson In the Throng

Mrs. William Culbertson was accompanied by her daughter. They made a striking pair, for Mrs. Culbertson's hat was of china blue feathers while Jane had chosen a coral velvet turban. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter Vera, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Dr. and Mrs. Pete Constantinople, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West and Miss Dorothy Tirrell with a fetching row of pink carnations about her hat.

Miss Laura Belle Wyatt and Miss Jane Wyatt were garbed in similar frocks of peacock blue taffeta. Others there were Mrs. Arthur Condon, Baroness von Below, the Former Minister to Canada and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Robert Jackson, wife of the Attorney General; Col. and Mrs. Charles March, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. Ruth Gillete and Miss Genevieve Reynolds.

Looking very chic was Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling with touches of purple on her hat. Mrs. Houghteling will be hostess at a small luncheon today. The Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caseres, were there she wearing a red feather toque.

Miss Janet Richards to Lecture on War At Sulgrave Club Affair on Friday

Miss Janet Richards will lecture on the international scene and the European war, at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon at the Sulgrave Club, 1801 Massachusetts avenue. This will be the 25th in a series of annual lectures on current events given by Miss Richards for the benefit of the Association of Work for Poor Churches, located at the Convent of the Perpetual Adoration, 1419 V street northwest. As in former years, she will illustrate her lecture with references to a map detailing the scene.

The cause for which Miss Richards is giving her services has been of interest to Washington society since the foundation of the association in 1875, by Miss Fanny Whelan, daughter of the then Surgeon General of the Navy. This year, owing to conditions in Europe, the association in this country has received many requests from poverty-stricken churches and missions formerly helped by foreign branches of the society no longer in a position to give aid. Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, Madame Victor Alfaro, Mrs. D. C. Stapleton, Mrs. John Galen Carter, Mrs. William Knoblock, Mrs. John E. Woodward, Miss Margaret Loughran, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Irwin Loughlin, and Mrs. Mae Hamilton are among the ladies who meet often at the convent to sew, or to plan how best to meet the requests received for altars, vestments, chalices and other necessities of needy churches.

Women Voters Report on Pacts

That opposition to the trade agreements program is more vocal than real was brought out by a public opinion sampling made by the National League of Women Voters through state League groups.

This sampling also showed that opposition tends to disappear with information, and that newspaper opinion is largely favorable to the trade agreements.

"Twenty years of work on the political front has taught us that the opinion that makes the most noise is not necessarily the strongest," said Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president. "The reports we are getting in from the States indicate this is particularly true of the Trade Agreements program."

Hadassah Observes Education Day

Miss Levinthal is the only woman who has been graduated from a recognized rabbinical school. Mrs. Aaron Shalowitz, chairman of education, will present her to the membership.

The Gentler Sex

The Good Old Days

I

Did ever anything go wrong in those ante bellum mansions,
Standing so majestically, with their white porticos,
At the end of winding driveways flanked by sad cypresses,
Dripping their Spanish moss?
Did ever the shingles rot, the roof leak, the foundations settle,
Did the doors and windows stick, did the ants come, or the cockroaches,
Did the mahogany and the Chippendale ever get scratched or sticky,
Or the chandeliers chipped and drab?

II

What ever happened when an "unseasonable" chill spell descended,
And the occupants of the handsome four posters had to rise shivering,
And dress in the cold, or roast on one side before a big fireplace,
And freeze on the other?
Were there always beaming "mammys" around, trusty and capable,
To clean the Wedgwood lamps, to carry in the hot water for bathing,
To bend over the wood fire or the hot coals, frying the chicken,
Or to shoo flies from the table?

III

Were those wide spacious lawns swept only by breezes, gentle and "balmy"
Were they filled only with moonlight and the scent of magnolia,
Did the roses and lilacs, the honeysuckle grow and give fragrance,
Without watering and pruning?
Did the waving grass ever have to be cut, did the gophers and moles
Ever tear up the sod, did the peacocks, proudly spreading their tails,
Ever scratch up the flower beds, and did the pestiferous chiggers
Ever live in the blue-bloods' blue grass?

IV

Did those belles in the hoop skirts, with curls on their sholders,
Ever speak with voices raspish, rather than gentle and low,
Or when their corsets or shoes pinched did they get a bit peevish,
Or shrewish, or sour?
Did those Southern womenfolk ever sight an unwelcome guest in the driveway,
And say so, and did their far-famed "gracious hospitality"
Ever run a bit thin; and while smirking did they chance to be thinking,
"Oh heavens when will she go?"

V

Were all the men cavaliers, galloping dashingly on horseback,
Over every lady's hand did they always bend double,
Were they towers of strength always shielding their women,
Mixtures of Galahad, Lochinvar, God?
Did they ever fail to jump up to pull down a curtain,
A fair hand had reached, were they ever unshaved, grouchy at breakfast,
Were the vices they boasted only the ones major, important,
Did they chew tobacco or snore?

VI

As a matter of fact, did every one live behind Colonial pillars?
There surely were houses not built so stately, magnificant.
Did girls from morn until night stay dressed in fichus and ruffles,
Eternally costumed for a dance?
Were there times when living could not be called "gracious,"
Or when hardships were not "epic," but petty and pricking,
Someway I suspect, despite my ante bellum nostalgia.
There were times when the good old days palled.

Lucite Watch Crystals

Watch crystals can now be had which, in addition to being virtually unbreakable, will not fall out. By using Lucite, a du Pont plastic, and a special machine, the crystal is welded into place by heat and pressure. It becomes hermetically sealed, giving a lasting and completely dustproof covering to the watch face. The plastic slightly magnifies the watch numerals. This service is now being offered by retail jewlers throughout the country.

Lace Is Fresh New Sentiment for Springtime

True harbingers of spring are lace and fresh posies, a relief after a season of heavy fabrics and drab colors. Below is a demurely fetching dance frock of Val lace and net, the big sleeves accenting the sweetheart out of the neckline. The orchids, worn aloft the girl's hair, and entwined around her arm with wired velvet to form a pair of hearts, were designed by New York's Irene Hayes, but could be duplicated. The frilly lace blouse, left, also dramatizes spring as well as your new navy blue suit. It is of sparkling white with a simple round neckline and a soft jabot.

Star Spangled Lace Charms Fashion Show

Legion Sponsors Fashion Promenade For New York Charity

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

LACE in the Star Spangled manner was a feature Friday night at a fashion showing at New York's Waldorf Astoria, with such patriotic citizens as Gen. John J. Pershing, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mayor LaGuardia and Gov. Lehman as patrons. Glorified as "The Star Spangled Banner Ball," the American Legion-sponsored fashion promenade attracted much interest both for the charity involved and for the eye-filling clouds of lace which popular 1940 debutantes wore.

Marshall Adams

There wasn't half a bolt of taffeta or crepe in the showing, rather an interesting assortment of laces of varied descriptions. The country's leading designers of graceful evening wear entered their vaporous-looking costumes either made entirely of lace or featuring it. Dorothy Coutour, formerly known for her clever designs in this city, presented a full skirted evening gown of shadowy Chantilly lace done in a spring pastel. Jane Derby presented a dreamy pale blue chiffon with a black lace bodice and black lace flounces running the length of the skirt. Kiviette, the talented stage costume designer, showed a seductive black net with black Alencon bodice and panel down the back.

Proving that lace takes just as well to less formal gowns, the famous tailored fingers of Helen Cookman got to work on a spring suit of covert cloth, roundly applauded because it was given softness by a pretty sheer lace blouse. In acute contrast was seen the effervescence of lace in a movie star gown designed for "The Great Victor Herbert." It was modeled by the featured player of that film, Mary Martin, whose much exploited figure took well to the combination of lace net and ostrich. And from a period just preceding the Victor Herbert one was presented a decolletage white lace gown worn during Jenny Lind's day and lent for the frothy Star Spangled Banner Ball by a historian of that period.

Modern Furniture

Modern is as modern does and not necessarily as it looks, at least that's the way it should be regarded in furniture design. The real idea is utility without excess ornamentation. You may have that principle streamlined if you choose, but plenty of eighteenth century furniture incarnates the same theory.

Your Figure, Madame

'Broom-Stroke Style' Developed in Teaching Before Mirrors

WITH most of the golf courses looking like ski trails, what do you think goes on in the heart of Manhattan? Golf! The business women and housewives are taking it up in droves, and, come summer, the greens should be overrun with competent young women who break 90.

Responsibility for this menace to masculine superiority in the ancient Scotch game can be laid on the doorstep of the West Side Y. W. C. A., in collaboration with Walt Graves. If you have the faintest interest in golf, you will identify Mr. Graves as one of the country's outstanding professionals.

From all we can learn in one easy lesson, golf seems to be essentially a woman's game. For instance, Mr. Graves teaches a technique we will call "the broom stroke style." It is Mr. Graves' contention that sweeping and swinging require practically the same approach, the main difference being that the broom is not brought up quite so high in preparation for the down-sweep.

Forget All the Rules

Further proof of the feminine character of the game is found in the successful realization of mirrors for correction of form! The beginning golfers who study their stance in the mirror are developing their game with a surprising speed.

Indoor practice helps you break 90

Many of these suggestions for the improvement of the game can be carried out in your living room. Since Mr. Graves and the Y. W. C. A. are willing, there's no reason why you shouldn't profit by this expert advice.

If you are the average golfer, you have two faults: 1. You do not know how the club head should meet the ball. 2. You "break" your wrists too soon. And those are two good reasons why your game hovers around 110, when, with a little homework, you could shoot a neat 90, and flabbergast your friends.

In order to correct these faults yourself, Mr. Graves suggests that you read all the good golf articles you can find and study the action photos of the leading pro's. The next step is to clear your mind more or less of the long list of rules, such as "Keep your arm straight, your elbow close, your head down, etc., etc.," and concentrate mainly on hitting the ball. And the third bit of advice is to learn the correct swing from your pro—and practice it!

Make Use of Mirrors

When you get down to practicing make use of one of your full-length closet door mirrors. Those action photographs will teach you that every good golfer has the same technique for hitting the ball. Study it and copy it. You can do that, oddly enough, without trying to hit a ball.

But there is a new practice device called the "swing test" to make your workout more fun. This consists of a circular green rubber mat, in the middle of which is a spindle with a rubber band and a rubber golf ball affixed. When you hit the ball correctly it climbs a rotary track to the top of the spindle. When you muff your shot, the ball dies on the mat. It is neat and neither gaudy nor expensive.

In addition, our pro is in favor of the putting devices which are on sale at all sporting goods shops. Anything to make practice more interesting. And, incidentally, you'll find yourself getting plenty of exercise for the waist, arms and shoulders!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Her Sparring Partner Turns Pinch-Hitter While Writer Gambols

New York, Feb. 11.

PLEASE don't be deluded by the above by-line. The stark truth is that Miss Hughes took off for Florida, and as she finds it difficult to thump the type-machine on trains, I am pinch-hitting for her in this crisis, the name being F. X. Hall, her ever-loving sparring partner.

I suppose this is really a commiseration column for husbands who have womenfolk who go places frequently. The male mind can never comprehend what goes on in a lady's mind when she travels. He likes to move out in one small suitcase, with the toothbrush in a vest pocket; but the women are only happy in proportion to the number of bags, hat boxes, suit boxes and extra coats they lug. The problem of getting them to the deppo is another soul-shaking experience. Men like to be there a half-hour early—women like to catch the last step as the rattler shoves off. So it is in my little home. She seldom misses.

So after the packing orgy we made the Pennsylvania Station with a few minutes to spare—accompanied by four suitcases, a dispatch case, a typewriter and a mess of orchids sent by an admirer. There we met Hughes' traveling pal of long standing, the small packet of dynamite called Lilly Dache, who makes those hats. Poor Dashay had only nine bags, plus a few of her outsized hat boxes. The luggage entirely filled Drawing Room B, Car A-742. Each girl had three coats along—one on the carcass, two on the arm. I imagine the ladies were forced to spend the night in the corridor, as a result.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN. New York's saddest experience is to see a pal off to Florida in midwinter, and then turn back alone in all the horrors of our town at this season. The best the Forgotten Man can do is to sit on a hot radiator and sip a long, chilled drink compounded of the rare fluid called "rum." And that is not too good a substitute. Where are all the beauteous maidens in bathing suits photographed at Miami Beach. Certainly not in my house!

I believe this space stepped off the dock with a prophecy that there would be no "reunion" between John Pagliacci Barrymore and his ethereal Elaine. Well, they are now nominally ducky-wucky, and the Jacobs girl will go back in the show—at last reports. But my spies say that loud, raucous word-spats break out between the doting pair at frequent intervals. The whole silly mess made enormous though pretty sickening publicity for John and his petty farce—but five will still get you ten that this "reconciliation" is anything but permanent.

SOME OF the prettiest post-debs in town gallantly taxi-danced, at a dollar a schottische, at the Star-Spangled Banner Ball at the Waldorf Friday. It was a benefit for needy Legion members. And you should have seen some of the wrecks and rebuilt jobs that came out on the floor in wheel chairs to dance with leetle ladeez. All for sweet charity, and the girls were gamesters. They collected the bucks in advance, lest their partners should not survive the number.

Fantasy Plays Part in Nursery

A baby's world begins to change about the time he starts to walk and talk. He comes to believe in the reality not only of the living people around him, but also in the reality of his own fantastic playthings. When that happens, it is the signal to start paying attention to his nursery, an article in the February House Beautiful advises.

More than anything, the rooms should be gay. You may paste circus poster animals on walls behind cutout wallpaper bars. Let the child's fantasy run wild. Pictures of birds, felt cutouts on the curtains, toy cabinets, blackboards—all assist in developing his self-expression.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man's Love for Girl Who Died Casts Blight Over Marriage; He Asks How to Forget

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 37 years of age, have twin sons almost 4 years old and have been married for 11 years to a beautiful woman. She is a wonderful housekeeper and has a splendid personality, but she loves to nag and I don't believe she could be sentimental even at a funeral. As for me, I am a poor excuse for a husband. I support my family to the best of my ability, but I take little interest in their personal affairs.

It may seem fantastic to you, but I am in love with a memory—the memory of a girl who died two years ago, when she was 17. I met her when she was 15, when I was running away from one of my wife's rampages. I had driven away in my car and a rain storm came up. I saw this girl waiting at a bus stop, with water pouring over her umbrella like Niagara Falls. I offered her a lift and she got in with just a second's hesitation. As she settled herself, I saw she was just a child. I drove her home and she thanked me with a radiant smile that I grew to love and depend upon, in the months that followed.

About a week later my wife had another tantrum and I called this girl. She remembered me. The acquaintance flourished and at the end of two months she knew my life's history and I knew hers. We tried to break up many times, but to no avail. Well, this went on for two years and she told me many times that she loved me, and although I was desperately in love with her, I never told her, as I felt I did not have the right. But I think she knew I loved her.

After two years she went to Texas to live with her father, following her mother's death. (She had been living here with an aunt.) She wrote me four letters filled with endearments. I did not write her, because I was afraid to commit my feelings to paper. . . . Then one day I saw in a newspaper that she had been killed. It was hard to believe she was gone. I felt to blame, for if I asked for a divorce and married her she might still be with me . . .

They say time is the best healer of problems like mine, but today, after two years, I miss her as keenly as ever. The problem is this: how can I rid myself of this memory? How can I make up to my wife for these past few years? And what of the twins—must their lives be ruined by a father who lives in the past? Should I tell my wife the truth? (She thinks there is another living woman).

FELIX.

Normal Living Veils the Past

DEAR FELIX: It is easy enough to tell you how to lay the girl's memory to rest; but the advice would be hard for one of your sort to follow. Painful wounds inflicted by emotional experience heal with normal living, rather than with the passage of years. And one who lives normally is he who has, as one writer has expressed it, "many vital contacts with life."

Obviously you are not in love with your wife, and thus you lack the psychic and social satisfaction which happy marriage provides. You have only an academic and dutiful interest in your children's welfare and are a confessed stranger to their individual personalities. And although an indifferent husband, you feel conscience bound to remain technically, if not spiritually, faithful. You make no mention of your professional activities, so I assume it amounts to a treadmill routine, which has as its only aim and reward a living wage. So where are your "vital contacts with life?" Find them and you will find release from this hypnotic memory.

Your trouble has to do, primarily, I think, with your disinclination to act boldly when faced by a dilemma of any sort. You lack the initiative and courage to take decisive action. You run away from reality into the recesses of your own imagination, then wonder why it holds you in thrall. It doesn't, really. You are entirely self-imprisoned.

Telling your wife the truth about "these past few years" is infinitely to be preferred to brooding over the guilty secret. By telling her the truth, you might get the marriage off to a new start. At least she would be given opportunity to understand and repent her own mistake, which precipitated yours—and she would have the consolation of knowing that she has no living rival.

It is pure melodramatics to visualize your children's lives being spoiled by your poetical love for a girl who died when they were scarcely out of the cradle. Come down to—(or back to)—earth and have done with such hysterical whimpering. Get in there and fight for your chance to lead a normal life.

Stand up to your wife's tantrums like a man, instead of running away like a spanked child. Tell her how much damage she has done the relationship already, and grimly inform her just how she must cooperate with you in future if the marriage is to be kept a going concern. If she refuses to cooperate, it will be time enough to think of planning a full life of your own apart from her.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Wholesome Foods Necessary to Combat Fatigue

There's nothing like fatigue to take the joy out of life! Some folks seem to be "born tired"—they're the ones who probably need medical attention. Others, who just never get caught up on their sleep, need to change their living routine. But, for most of us, fatigue can be prevented or reduced to a great extent by the right kind of diet.

This doesn't mean you should eat a hearty meal when you're exhausted. When the system actually is suffering from an overload of work, a light easy-to-digest meal is best. However, a well-balanced diet, continued over a period of time, denitely can help build resistance to fatigue.

Such a diet should include plenty of vitamins, minerals, proteins, and energy foods. You will get them all if your menus contain liberal amounts of milk, eggs, fruits and green and yellow vegetables.

BE EXTRA CAREFUL NOW ABOUT COLDS! WHAT TO DO

Keep out of crowds as much as possible. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Don't take needless chances. Don't experiment with untried medications. And be sure to have these two time-tested home-approved treatments on hand, ready to use.

How to Help PREVENT Colds Developing

At the first warning sneeze, sniffle, or irritated feeling in your nose—use Vicks VA-TRO-NOL. Just put a few drops up each nostril. Right away you can feel Va-tro-nol stimulating Nature's own cold-fighting defenses. It actually helps to keep many colds from developing—or to throw them off in the early stages.

Remember this too . . . for swift relief from the suffocating stuffiness and congestion of a head cold use Vicks Va-tro-nol.

How to RELIEVE Miseries of Developed Colds

Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VAPORUB. Then spread a thick layer over chest and cover with warmed cloth. Immediately VapoRub starts to bring relief two direct ways: (1) Direct on the skin like an old-fashioned poultice or plaster; (2) at the same time, its medicated vapors are breathed in direct to irritated air passages. This poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm, relieves coughing, clears air passages, and eases muscular soreness and tightness.

Now Be Prepared—Get a bottle of Vicks VA-TRO-NOL and a jar of Vicks VAPORUB today and take the above precautions. They may save you a lot of sickness and worry.

Avocados Excellent When Served as a Vegetable

WHEN does a fruit become a vegetable? And when is a vegetable a fruit? Anyone who can answer these two questions will cure a lot of headaches for the food technicians. In such confusion avocados have earned for themselves a place in the vegetable classification for they are excellent when served as vegetables and in their native habitats classic recipes have long existed for their preparation. A recipe from old Mexico makes the avocado into an appealing vegetable dish. It is a stuffed arrangement and the recipe follows:

Stuffed Avocados

Peel avocados—which should not be too large. Cut lengthwise and remove seeds. For each avocado use 2 tablespoons ground cooked pork, 1 small tomato chopped, 3 capers, ¼ teaspoon minced marjoram or parsley, salt and pepper to taste and mix. Stuff the halves. Cover with ½ egg beaten, then with bread crumbs, and fry in butter until browned all over. Lay in baking dish, cover with tomato sauce and finish cooking in the oven.

Try diced avocados in omelets and in scrambled eggs; or dice and heat them in a la King sauce and serve in patty shells or on toast. Or mixed with shredded chicken and make croquettes, fried in deep fat. Avocados stuffed with cheese—any cream cheese—dipped in beaten egg, then in crumbs, fried in butter or fat until brown, and covered with tomato sauce and finished cooking in the oven, makes a superb dish, too.

Baby Brokers Bring Tragedy To All Involved

Welfare Worker Tells How Adopters Have Been Deceived

the hospital when it was three days old. Later the mother was sorry. She became frantic and came to the child welfare division for help. Since July 1, she has been trying to get the baby back. She is not a resident of the District and for various reasons the board is not sure if it could push the matter to a successful conclusion in court," Mrs. Trevvett said.

"The mother's mentality is not high. At least two of her children are borderline cases, near feeblemindedness. There are indications that this baby may be feebleminded. Because of that, the placement may crack up in the next three or four years, with anguish for the family which has taken the child.

"But that is not the whole story. The commercial agent had arranged for two of the woman's children to be cared for in a private institution, while she was in the hospital. And the agent had been sending people out to see these children with the idea that they too might be adopted. In the meantime the agent kept another one of these children in her own home. But the mother did not consent to let these children go."

A Tragic Case

Mrs. Trevvett told of another case which has already reached a tragic end.

"A girl who was a ward of the Board of Public Welfare was placed in an institution for the feebleminded, but she absconded and we lost track of her. When she had a child, a commercial agent got in touch with her. The baby was sent to New York, and the agent here gave assurance that the baby was of sturdy stock.

"As a matter of fact, the child's mother had a very poor background. Several members of the family were feebleminded, as she was. In addition, she had progressive blindness. The agent here admitted to the New York agency, which handled the baby there, that the mother had not gone beyond the third grade. When asked why, the agent said 'poor eyesight from measles'.

"When asked if the mother was known to any agency, this person said 'no,' although at the time the mother was a ward of the Board of Public Welfare.

"The New York agency placed the child in an adoptive home, but the family was not satisfied with the way the baby was responding. The child was returned to the agency which made three or four other placements, all unsatisfactory.

"Finally the New York agency asked the child welfare division here if it would take the child back, but we refused, of course—because they had had the child for several years and had taken it on their own responsibility. It is now in a New York institution.

"All this agony for the child and for the adoptive parents could have been avoided if this activity of the commercial agent could have been prevented. But the law here does not now prevent it."

"I know of a family in another State who took a baby, born here, from a commercial agent on the installment plan. They made a down payment of about $75 on the $450," she said.

"The family tried to adopt the child, but the courts in that State would not accept the 'third-party consent' of the agent. Mothers who give up babies to this agent customarily sign fictitious names to the paper surrendering the child. And, of course, this paper does not give direct consent to the adoption itself.

"In the home where this child was placed, the father died. About $250 had been paid, but his widow could not meet the next payment. And, since the child couldn't be adopted in that State anyway, she wanted to return the child to the agent here. By that time the child was about 3 years old.

"At first the agent wouldn't take the child back, but the woman took steps to go to the district attorney's office, and then the agent decided that the child could be returned.

"The agent then called a relative of this same family in still another State, and asked if he was still interested in getting a child? The agent learned that he was, and the child was passed on again."

Townsend Calls Security Act Vicious, Harmful

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 11 (AP).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, author of the pension plan which bears his name, described the Social Security Act today as "the most vicious, harmful piece of legislation ever enacted" and outlined a new plan he said would provide $50 a month for everyone over 60.

At the same time, Abraham Epstein, executive secretary of the American Association for Social Security, charged Dr. Townsend's proposal was "completely unreal—socially, economically and politically," and said the present social security system is "as broad and liberal as any ever undertaken by a government."

The two men debated at Union College's weekly Empire State town meeting.

Gurley Leads St. Martin's Dedication

40-Year Dream Of Congregation Is Culminated In $140,000 Edifice

Led by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, Catholic ecclesiastical and lay leaders of the two cities yesterday helped dedicate the new $140,000 St. Martin's Catholic Church at North Capitol and T streets.

Gathering in the Florentine Renaissance-styled structure—culmination of a 40-year congregational dream—some 1,500 men, women and children heard the archbishop express appreciation for the privileges of religious freedom, of "living in a land where churches are being built, not torn down."

Msgr. Riordan Is Praised

Praise for the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Riordan, 18 of whose 52 years in the priesthood have been spent as rector of St. Martin's; for the parishioners' contribution toward the project's completion, and for the liturgical music also came from Archbishop Curley.

Earlier, he headed a colorful dedicatory procession of participating priests, from the rectory to the new building, which he blessed as male choristers of the congregation chanted Gregorian music on the steps. Members of the Holy Name Society formed a guard of honor.

Delivering the sermon at services of solemn high mass, the Rev. Herbert Gallagher, O. F. M., vice commissary of the Commissariat of the Holy Land, the Franciscan Monastery, pictured the ceremony as "an opportunity to refocus the lens of our spiritual camera to determine the supernatural wonders taking place in our natural world, only in the Catholic Church."

Many Assist in Rites

Officers of the rites of solemn high mass were Msgr. Riordan, celebrant; the Rev. Maurice B. Alexander, pastor of Our Lady Star of the Sea Church, Solomon's Island, Md., deacon; the Rev. Stephen W. McCabe, assistant pastor of St. Martin's, sub-deacon; the Right Rev. Msgrs. Charles R. O'Hara, rector of Holy Comforter Church, and Edwards P. McAdams, rector St. Joseph's Church, chaplains to Archbishop Curley.

Assisting the Archbishop in the dedication were the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, rector of St. Thomas the Apostle Church, and the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., of the Sulpician Seminary, and the Rev. Henry Grabenstein, of Baltimore.

Organized in 1901.

Among other guests were the Right Rev. Msgr. Joseph McCormick, vice rector of Catholic University; the Rev. Robert Achstetter, rector of SS. Philip and James Church, Baltimore; Sisters of Notre Dame and others.

The Rev. Louis F. Miltenberger, assistant pastor of the congregation who served as master of ceremonies, was in charge of the financial drive.

Under his direction more than $40,000 was pledged in a six weeks' campaign started in 1938. Within 18 months $33,000 had been paid in cash.

The congregation, organized in 1901, for 28 years has been worshiping in the basement part of the present edifice. Work was launched on the new building last February. The cornerstone was laid on May 14, 1939, by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States.

Auto Trade Chief Asks Investigation Of Gasoline Sales

For the "protection of honorable" automobile dealers as well as motorists in the District, Lee D. Butler, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, last night demanded an investigation of the alleged "chiseling" on gasoline sales here.

Butler said he would seek conferences this week with Representatives Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, and Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who have interested themselves in the reported sale of inferior fuel as "high test" gasoline.

Butler urged a special laboratory operated by the District government to make periodic tests of gasoline.

VALLE

Carl Sandburg's life of Lincoln is a best-seller in Mexico, according to Senor Rafael Heliodoro Valle, associate editor and book reviewer for "Excelsior," Mexico City daily.

The newspaperman, who arrived in Washington yesterday to attend a meeting of the Inter-American Bibliographical Library Association, February 23, said that from a Mexican point of view relations with the United States were today far better than they were 10 years ago.

Due to the war in Europe, Mexico is preparing for a friendly invasion of American tourists, he revealed.

Senor Heliodoro Valle, vice president of the organization, will deliver an address on Mexico's celebration of its fourth centennial of printing before the Inter-American Association. He will remain in Washington to conduct research for a Spanish-American bibliography.

Yegg in Icebox Toils 2 Hours For $750 Loot

Wrestles 400-Pound Safe Into Refrigerator In Cafe to Rob It

A diligent yegg, who wrestled a 400-pound safe into an electric icebox, then spent two hours chiseling it open in near-freezing temperatures, was rewarded with more than $750 some time Saturday night.

The robbery was discovered yesterday morning when Stephen Chaconas, of 3500 Fourteenth street northwest, opened his restaurant at 516 North Capitol street. Chaconas told police the safe contained papers in addition to the cash, but they were not molested.

Robbery squad detectives found the safe inside the establishment's large refrigerator, an electric affair which had not been turned off. Marks on the strongbox, they said, indicated the cracksman had spent at least two hours opening it with a chisel, hammer and crowbar.

Two holes were chiseled near the lock tumblers and the tumblers turned by hand, to open the safe. They said the manner in which the job was executed indicated it had been performed by an amateur.

Before hoisting the safe into the icebox, the robber rolled it more than 20 feet across a rough floor. Chaconas was unable to explain how the robber happened to leave the refrigerator running while he worked.

Capital News In Brief

Hot Initiation

However active he may be in his lodge, Milton Peppler, 40, of Baltimore, will never forget he's a member.

Peppler was initiated at ceremonies here last night and somewhere along the rocky road the neophyte treads, he received gunpowder burns which will cause him to sit gingerly for a time. Police learned from Emergency Hospital authorities that he was burned by powder from a .32 caliber blank cartridge.

That is about all police did learn. Lodge rules, they were politely but firmly told, made it impossible to reveal just exactly how Peppler came by his wound.

Hudson Kin Sought

Several years ago the District of Columbia Chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans Association, planted a tree to the memory of Maj. William B. Hudson on Sixteenth street northwest. Now the chapter is endeavoring to locate the nearest relatives of Maj. Hudson, who was killed in France in 1918.

A memorial service will be conducted soon at the tree and the chapter wishes to have relatives of Maj. Hudson present if possible. Relatives are asked to communicate with association headquarters in the Munsey Building.

First Lady to Be Guest

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be guest of honor of the Monday Evening Club at its annual banquet today at 7 p. m. at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Judge Fay Bentley, president of the club, will receive with the other officers at 6:30 p. m. Ray Everett, former president, will be toastmaster.

$900 Brooch Lost

Mrs. Mae L. Hamilton, of 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest, last night lost a diamond brooch valued at $900 somewhere between the Chevy Chase Club and her home, she told police.

Dr. Ellicott to Speak

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, will address a meeting of the 13-1 Democratic Club of Montgomery County, Md., Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. at Glenmont, Md., School.

Hundreds of Boys Attend Churches In Uniform

Reconsecration to the principle of the twelfth Scout law—reverence—was urged here yesterday from Catholic and Protestant pulpits, as "Boy Scout Sunday" drew hundreds of uniformed lads to church services.

Honor guests on the occasion, a feature of the thirtieth anniversary celebration of the scouting movement, the youngsters were reminded that a scout "is reverent toward God . . . faithful in his religious duties, and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion."

Dr. Walter M. Michael, leader of the Eldbrooke Methodist Church, expressed the opinion that delegates to the American Youth Congress were "thinking only of themselves" in the question of securing employment, and that they should consider the employers' viewpoint, as well as the employes'.

Seeking Utopia

While Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, made no reference to the Youth Congress at last night's Scout service of his congregation, he said at the morning service that he thought the delegates were being drawn here in the hope of finding "some sort of a Utopia."

Catholic Scout rites were centered at St. Matthew's Cathedral, where several hundred boys assembled in the late afternoon.

Headed by the Knights of Columbus Band, a procession of Scouts and their scoutmasters, committeemen and other leaders, down Rhode Island avenue and into the edifice opened the exercises, at which Dr. Paul H. Furfey, of the sociology department of Catholic University, spoke.

Medals Presented

Officers of the service were the Right Rev. Edward L. Buckley, pastor of St. Matthew's, celebrant; the Rev. Edward A. Fuller, chaplain of Girl Scouts of the Washington Archdiocese, deacon, and the Rev. Ronald J. Fannon, chaplain of the Boy Scouts of the Archdiocese, subdeacon.

In the same service the Right Rev. Msgr. Louis C. Vaeth, rector of Our Lady of Victory Parish, presented the Archishop's medal for distinguished work in Scouting to William T. McCloskey, special national field commissioner, and Fathers Fallon and Fuller.

CoupleObserves Jubilee on Lincoln Day

William Henderson has had an easy time remembering his wedding anniversary the last 50 years. It coincides with Lincoln's Birthday. Mr. Henderson and his wife celebrated their golden wedding yesterday, however, at their home in Forest Glen, Md., so that their relatives and friends could attend without difficulty.

Mr. Henderson, who is 75, was born in Glen Haven, Wisconsin, and came to Washington when he was 20 years old. He was with House & Herrmann, the furniture company, for 46 years. He was active in the Seventh Street Business Men's Association and in the Mid City Citizens Association. He is a member of the Silver Spring Lodge of Masons.

Mrs. Henderson, who is a native Washingtonian, who doesn't look her 71 years, was the former Miss Margaret Deland. Her father was an employe of the Treasury Department for 56 years. She is president of the Forest Glen Reading Club and has been an active member of the Thirteenth District Republican Club. The Hendersons both have been active in the Takoma Park Baptist Church for years.

Included in the large group of relatives and friends who attended the golden wedding tea yesterday were William H. Henderson, of Detroit, Mich., their only son, and his daughter, Miss Peggy Henderson, 13.

City Churches Mark First Sunday in Lent

Place Where Lincoln Worshiped Holds Memorial Service

Political action and international relationships would become instruments for building a divine democracy upon earth if God were "the chief enthusiasm of mankind," the Right Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, Bishop of West Virginia, said here yesterday.

"Human life, now so cheap, would become of precious value, and there would be less of frustration and bitterness, of futility, hopelessness and despair in human hearts if He were the 'chief enthusiasm'," Dr. Strider told the congregation at Epiphany Episcopal Church. He will address the noonday Lenten rites there, today through Friday, from 12:05 to 12:30 p. m.

Many other Lenten-keynoted messages were heard in churches yesterday—the first Sunday of the pre-Easter season. Other sermons recalled the 131st birthday of Abraham Lincoln, being celebrated today.

Lincoln Day Dinner Tonight

New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, where the Lincoln family worshiped, had a special commemoration, Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor, preaching on the theme of "A Man for the Ages." The Lincoln pew is one of the church's treasures. The annual Lincoln Day dinner will be held there tonight at 6:30 p. m., Dr. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, vice President of the Washington branch of the English Speaking Union, bringing the address.

Lenten services have been arranged for this week by the Washington Federation of Churches; Southeast Protestant congregations, meeting at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, Chevy Chase Protestant churches, and Washington Lutheran groups. Many individual services also are scheduled.

Southeast Series Slated

The Christ Episcopal Church, Navy Yard, led by the Rev. Edward Gabler, will have charge of the Southeast series this week, Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, preaching today at 12:10 noon.

The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, will address the federation services on Wednesday at 4:45 p. m. at Epiphany Church.

Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, tonight at 8 p. m. will be host to the opening meeting of Washington Lutheran churches' joint services. Dr. Gideon Olson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will speak. Services are planned for Monday nights.

Lutherans Pray for Finns

Lutheran churches observed yesterday as a "day of prayer for Finland, for missions and for all war sufferers," and joined in inaugurating the local phase of a nation-wide appeal for a $500,000 emergency war relief fund. About $350,000 of the fund will aid war suffering in Finland. The balance will aid Lutheran foreign missions whose work has been curtailed by the war.

A meeting to launch formally the drive here is scheduled for the Continental Hotel at 12:30 p. m. today. Dr. Oscar C. Mees, of Canton, Ohio, national administrator for the drive, will speak.

Church Choristers To Give Two Concerts

The boy choristers of the Immaculate Conception Church will give concerts Thursday and Friday evenings beginning at 8:30 p. m. at Hurney Hall, Eighth and N streets northwest.

Directed by C. A. Benson, the choir has been in existence four years. The program this week will vary church music with classical ballads and excerpts from operas.

Missionary Says China Will Survive

New-Found Unity Can't Be Crushed, Mrs. Lewis Tells Presbyterian Group

Increasing national and spiritual unity in China, in spite of the war, was described here yesterday by Mrs. C. H. Lewis, missionary.

Member of a "team" of visiting missionaries addressing a mass meeting of the Presbyterian Foreign Affairs Institute, she said "such faith, determination and vitality" demonstrated by the Chinese people could not be crushed.

Dr. Herrick B. Young, secretary of missionary personnel of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, reported the evangelical churches' influence growing in South America, especially in Chile.

Other speakers on the program, held at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, were Dr. William P. Schell, of the board's home base department; the Rev. Welling T. Cook, of Chosen, and others. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, host pastor, presided. The Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church and chairman of foreign mission work for the Washington City Presbytery, attended.

He is handling arrangements for the institute, which opened last Friday. Missionary speakers yesterday addressed 20 Presbyterian congregations.

It will close today with a meeting of the Presbyterial at 10:30 a. m. at Covenant-First Church, Dr. Leon Hooper, of the Phillipines, speaking, and a session of the Presbytery at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church at 11 a. m., Drs. J. Christy Wilson, Willis C. Lamott and Cook speaking.

The parley's sponsors are the Foreign Missions Committee of the Washington City Presbytery, the Presbyterial Society and the Young People's League.

Lincoln Great Handshaker, Soldier Recalls

Jonathan Leavitt, 94-year-old Union veteran, gazed back through the memories of three-quarters of a century yesterday and recalled America's lanky civil war President and his plump wife whose benevolence cost the veteran six months' relapse in his illness.

"Do I remember Mrs. Lincoln?" Leavitt settled back on the sofa at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Robert Harter, 505 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md. "Why, of course I do. A very gracious lady she was, even if she did make me sick.

"I was in the Carver Hospital near Soldier's Home, recovering from typhoid fever, when Mrs. Lincoln came in to see me. They had what they called the Sanitary Commission, something like the Red Cross. Mrs. Lincoln gave me some sliced peaches. I ate a slice and a half and it caused a relapse. When she heard about it, Mrs. Lincoln came back to see me nearly every day.

"She was a good looking little woman—short and inclined to be fat. The boys all loved her.

"Lincoln—all the soldiers knew him. He was a clever man—great hand to shake hands. When he came around he always shook hands. Why, often I shook hands with him twice a day. He never had a guard when he walked around the hospital. Used to ride horsebacg through the mud.

"The Lincolns had their summer home at Soldiers' Home then. They used to ride in a carriage, with a coachman and a cavalryman riding along. I don't remember ever seeing Mrs. Lincoln on horseback.

"I knew Wilkes Booth. In fact, we resembled each other so much I often was mistaken for him. He was about 10 years older than me and a sociable fellow. He gave me his picture one time. It is packed away in my things."

Leavitt was in the hospital about two years, he said.

Civil Rights Law Passage Urged For Washington

There are groups in this country which aim to set up the Nation's Capital as a model for racial discriminatory practices, a Lincoln celebration civil rights mass meeting was told last night at Lincoln Temple Congregational Church. The rally was sponsored by the Washington Civil Rights Committee.

The speaker Walter A. White, secretary, National Association for Advancement of Colored People, advocated a national organization to fight for passage of a civil rights law here.

Other speakers were Thomas P. Bomar, secretary of the National Alliance of Postal Employes; Hobson Reynolds, chairman of the civil liberties committee of the colored Elks; C. Herbert Marshall, of the District Suffrage Association; W. Robert Ming, Eugene Davidson and Thurman L. Dodson. Henry Lincoln Johnson presided.

Society Rolls in the Aisles At Maxwell Lecture on Fun

'Chip' Robert Wins Chinese Humidor For Best Retort

Elsa Maxwell, a jolly fat girl of 57, who preaches fun and practices what she preaches, last night delivered a serious hour-long lecture on the "Science of Laughter" before an overflow Town Hall audience at the Shoreham Hotel.

The socialites who had gathered to laugh at the wit of the famed party-thrower and ego deflater poised over her every expression but had few chances to chuckle as Miss Maxwell stuck to her theme—that there'd be more happiness in the world if there were more laughter and fun.

"If Hitler had laughed but once," she maintained, "there'd never have been a war."

The "queen of entertainers"—she hates that title—then swung into her free-and-easy rollicking style, got the elite audience playing guessing games and soon had it rolling in the aisles with a riotous account of her rise into society "on the end of a horse."

Robert Wins the Prize

To Lawrence W. (Chip) Robert, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, Elsa awarded a Chinese humidor for the best retort of the evening.

"If you had a chance to be a president, general, dictator, musician, or artist," Elsa asked the gathering, "which would you be, and why?"

"President Roosevelt," Roberts called out, "so that I'd know whether or not he's running for a third term."

Elsa then asked: "If you could have witnessed anything that ever occurred, what would you have preferred to see?

"Hitler hanging paper on a wall," cried one.

"Noah's Ark—so's I could get hold of the first two mosquitoes," returned another.

Tells Her Own Story

Another prize taker was the woman who confessed that of all the animals—if she had to be one—she'd rather be a skunk, "because then society would respect me."

Her own story of Elsa's entry into social life via the English sporting set runs like a chapter from Wodehouse.

Elsa, it seems, had no money or talent, but she desperately wanted to be "somebody" and meet folks. So on a friendly tip she took a boat for England, met a duke who tossed a quoit into her boullion, and was invited to his estate in the hunting country. There Elsa, who had never ridden except as a straphanger in the subway, amazed the sporting set with her equestrienne skill by beating the fox to the kill.

That one ride, Elsa explained, was the last for her and most likely the last for the horse. To this day, she said, the English horse country still drinks a toast to "that wonderful woman and her wonderful seat."

"Mental Banana Peel"

Miss Maxwell, who also plays the piano, writes books and acts in motion pictures, had an answer for any question from the floor.

What kind of a party would she stage for Hitler? A party in a lethal chamber with laughing gas.

Why didn't she ever get married? No one ever proposed.

"Always take the light things seriously, the serious things lightly," advised Elsa, describing the evolution of her fun-philosophy.

Her own enjoyment in living, she pointed out, comes from an ability to laugh at herself. "People filled with dignity and self-inflation fail to see how funny we human beings really are," Elsa averred. "While you laugh, you can't be unhappy, in pain, or committing suicide."

She urged every person to "adopt a mental banana peel and slip on it—mentally—once in a while."

West Helps East Celebrate New Year's in Chinatown

Bizarre Cantonese Gods Watch Over On Leong Hall as Incense Veils Exotic Dance to Twanging Guitars

The moon guitars and the three-stringed violins shrilled last night as a 64-year-old Chinese girl danced at the On Leong Chinese Merchants Association.

It was the New Year in Washington's Chinatown—the year 30 if you talk to a young Cantonese to whom the republic is important. Otherwise, the year is 4600-odd.

There was revelry in the 600 block of H street northwest all day. In the afternoon a chanting "dance-parade" weaved through the streets.

And last night at the tong headquarters at 620 H street northwest, in calmer mood, the District's prosperous Cantonese continued the party for their Occidental friends.

There, smiling Chinese ushered to seats the "friends"—and curious—who packed into the second-floor room, and politely brought them thimble glasses of wine and whisky.

On the left of the cleared space where the "special music" played, a table held candied Chinese fruits, curry and American oranges.

Banked on the table were a dozen bouquets of flowers, one of them "extending greetings and good wishes for the New Year," from a Marine Corps major.

Screened by the flowers was a small alcove. There, where few looked, a coil of punk smoked in front of a painting of three ferocious-appearing Cantonese gods.

The smoke from the punk mingled with the sweet smell of incense and the clouds of cigarette smoke in other parts of the room. The "special music" sing-songed on interminably. The merchants of the On Leong grouped together around the orchestra and clapped the Chinese doll and chatted.

Woman, 55, Felled, Robbed in Street By Lone Footpad

A 55-year-old woman and a 38-year-old man were assaulted and robbed by thugs yesterday.

A lone assailant hurled Cordelia M. Levy, of 15 E street northwest, to the ground, and when she refused to let go her purse he grabbed her by the throat. He escaped with the purse, which contained $1.75. The robbery occurred at North Capitol and E streets.

Three men attacked John F. Granger, of 1327 Tenth street northwest, as he was walking along the 600 block of F street northwest. They took $5. Granger required treatment for a fractured nose and other injuries at Emergency Hospital.

Sellis Taylor, of 1326 Euclid street northwest, colored janitor, frightened off two gunmen who attempted to hold him up outside his apartment. When he picked up a piece of pipe, they fired several wild shots and ran off.

Mission Opened At Silver Spring

A two-week mission for the congregation of St. Michael's Catholic Church, Silver Spring, Md., opened last night with services by Father Thomas McMahon, C. S. P., of Winchester, Tenn. This week's services will be held for the women of the parish, and, beginning next Sunday, there will be a weeks' mission for the men.

Mass will be said every morning at 6:45 and 8:15. Evening worship with special sermons and music will begin at 8.

Eagles Beat Gulls Second Time in 2 Days, 2-1

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1940 14

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(During Shirley Povich's vacation his column is being written by other members of the sports staff.)

By Walter Haight

All I know about tennis is that the balls have fuzz on them when they are new . . . but I believe I can see through the suspensions of Mako and Sabin for over-doing the expense racket . . . Could it be that the U. S. L. T. A. is getting tough because there will not be any Davis Cup matches this year? . . . why don't the tennis gods tear a page out of the hockey book, give the players more than expenses and let it go at that . . . nobody would care . . .

HAIGHT

Henry Hiser had the films of the Louis-Godoy fight running at his theater in Bethesda 22 hours after the battle ended . . . incidentally, Hiser picked Schmeling to knock out Louis when the German turned the trick . . . but the daddy of all predictions, in my book, happened in The Post Sports Department . . . in writing an assignment for a photographer, Ben Dulaney, our sports editor, put the following notation thereon: "Get picture of knockout in 2 minutes and 35 seconds of the third round" . . . Natie Brown stopped Mickey McAvoy at the precise second Dulaney picked . . . it was not his fault that the judges ruled the blow foul . . .

Many high school coaches have gone on record as opposing the game of basketball as now played . . . it's too fast with the center jump eliminated, they say . . . although I'm not an authority on basketball, I believe I have a plan that might work out . . . the chief trouble with the old "toss up the ball between the centers" was that the club with the tallest center had too great an advantage . . . why not limit high school centers to boys 6 feet tall? . . . this would give each team an even break as to height and make the tap-off strictly a case of the ability of the centers and the teams to gain possession of the ball . . . most high school clubs have at least one player who is 6 feet . . . for college teams the height could be raised to 6 feet and a couple of inches . . . I believe the game has lost a lot by eliminating the plays and strategy that once surrounded the tap-off I realize that coaches, many of them, don't like the jumping because it takes up time when their teams are several points behind . . . however, there seems little chance that football would eliminate the kick-off for the same reason.

Now for a little racing. One of the best-named turf stables is the Needmore Stable . . . colors are yellow, blue diamonds (get it?), yellow and blue cap . . . the name should be changed to the Needmore Winners Stable . . . and possibly there should be more diamonds in the colors . . . a boy I know went to Florida for the races and wired his dad: "Send more money, the game is good" . . . Seldom has one jockey dominated a single stake race as Earl Sande did the Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park . . . he won it five times . . . with Mad Hatter twice, Altwood, Chance Play and Gallant Fox . . . The horse Colin, bred in 1905 by J. R. Keene, raced only for two years but was never beaten, in 15 starts. The son of Commando only figured in two close races, winning both by head margins . . . he could carry weight, too . . . his first victory was at 110 pounds . . . from then on he never carried less than 120 . . . and on one occasion won with 129 . . . except for his maiden effort, every race was of stake caliber . . . due to the rather meager purses of that era, Colon was able to gather only $181,610 in purses . . . The record daily-double payoff is still $7,205.40 at Tropical Park on March 18, 1935 . . . the horses were Wanoah and Arakay . . . the tops for Maryland was the $6,754.50 that went to those who held the combination of Charles F. and James Boy . . . Speaking of hunches, Dave Herman, the wrestling press agent, feels like batting his head against a wall every time he thinks of "Scatter Brain" . . . the day after I dedicated the song by that name to him, the horse, Scatter Brain, won the last at Santa Anita at a $40 mutuel . . .

Chris Wood, jr., associated with the turf for a number of years as broadcaster and publicity man, finally is convinced that the automobile is here to stay . . . he has given up the horses temporarily to handle promotion work for the Hudson Motor Co. in Washington . . . he's offering a tip in the first at Bowie with each new cab . . . Station WOL had a winning parlay at Havana last week . . . Longwinded (named for Art Brown) won the fifth race and Bellum (named for the control room engineer) took the sixth . . . I wonder what has become of the game of "taddy" that all Washington youngsters used to play . . . now that Natie Brown is essaying a comeback, I'm thinking about dragging out Young Van . . . Van, only 27 now, owns a farm in Maryland and spends several hours a day cutting wood . . . he had more sense than most fighters . . . he came out of the ring wars without a scar and a nice little bankroll . . . he stayed in the game only long enough to learn that he couldn't reach the top . . . we can count Challedon out of the $50,000 Widener . . . unless I miss a guess.

If the 3-year-old champion was going to run on March 2, he would be on the grounds . . . unless he runs in the McLennan Handicap, he will not have a race in the book for him . . . even a horse of Challedon's caliber can't come out of winter retirement and stand the gaff with seasoned horses . . . then it will be remembered that Challedon was slow to find himself last year . . . being beaten in the Derby because of lack of work . . . it is probable that Owner Brann and Trainer Schaffer have this in mind . . . the return to form of Seabiscuit adds a lot of flavor that has been denied him so far in two nose finishes . . . with Seabiscuit running on the Coast and Challedon out of the Widener, Florida would have to play second fiddle . . . too bad, that the boys at Santa Anita and Hialeah couldn't get together and not put their big races on the same day . . . if you don't want to get a fiery stare, don't refer to pool in front of a pocket billiard star . . . or don't say ping pong in front of a table tennis champion . . . somehow, I just love to do it.

This Should Clinch the Debate About Lombardi's Plate 'Doze'

Manager McKechnie Does Not Blame Ernie For 'Boner' at Home

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 11.—Deacon Bill McKechnie, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, today knocked sky high any idea that punishment or reprisal might be meted out to Ernie Lombardi, Reds' catcher who took a "nap" at home plate in the final game of the 1939 World Series.

"It was a tough break," McKechnie said of the incident in which Lombardi was knocked down by Charlie Keller, of the Yankees, and lay dazedly across the plate while Joe DiMaggio scored. "The razzing that Ernie took for that mishap was unjustified—too bad."

ERNIE LOMBARDI

Praised by Pilot

One game does not make or break a ball player, the sage of Wilkinsburg, Pa., continued. "After all, Lombardi played in 130 games for the championship last season and turned in a fine performance in the All-Star game. The Reds want Lombardi back. He wants to come back to Cincinnati, and my guess is that he will be right in there catching for at least 100 games this season."

Technically, the big catcher is a passive holdout. At least he is dissatisfied with the terms of his 1940 contract, but McKechnie believes Ernie and the front office will come to terms shortly.

Here for a bit of relaxing before his batterymen report February 26, McKechnie said he expected better pitching this year than last.

"Walters, Derringer and Gene Thompson should be as good as last year," he said. "I believe we can use Jim Turner (obtained from Boston) as a starting pitcher. Johnny Vander Meer should come back. Hemakes them hustle."

never got going last year. From what I hear, he's ready for a big comeback."

Says Cards Are Tough

The dour deacon said he knew that some were conceding the pennant to the St. Louis Cardinals and admitted that they're a tough ball club.

"But check the 1939 records," he said, "and you will find we licked the Cards in every important series.

"The Reds figure to be stronger in 1940—with the confidence gained by winning such and rough-and-tumble scrap as we had last year."

McKechnie has not picked his 1940 line-up yet and is not expected to do so soon.

"My custom is to let the boys know there is a wide open battle for every position," he said. "That

Goalie Harry McQuestion made a nice save off a hot shot by Les Ramsay (on ice, No. 12), Washington Eagles' center, in second period of match at Riverside Stadium last night. Towering over Ramsay is big Red Storey, the Sea Gulls' greatly unpopular defense man

Davies' Long Goal Decides Tight Clash

1,500 See Second Period Point Give Locals First Sunday League Scrap Here

By Jack Munhall.

A wild stab of a shot by Bill Davies late in the second period last night gave the resurging Washington Eagles a 2-1 victory over the Atlantic City Sea Gulls at Riverside Stadium in the inaugural of Sunday Eastern Amateur competition here.

About 1,500 fans were on hand to chuckle as the big Washington defense got his stick on a rebounding puck while standing just in front of the blue line and with a savage golf swing send it whizzing into the nets. Davies, however, got the last laugh for this proved the deciding point as the teams battled through a scoreless final period.

No Fights in Game

The match was the usual rough affair between bitter rivals but at no time did the promiscuous cross-checking and high sticking tactics lead to fisticuffing. Phil Vitale and Red Storey, the Sea Gulls' pair of "bad boys," drew down a constant roar of boos from the crowd as they used their bulk to wicked advantage against the smaller Washington players.

Vitale increased his lead as the league's most frequent penalty box visitor by serving a trio of three-minute banishments, twice for tripping and once for fighting with Bunny McKillop, of Washington. Storey landed in the "meanie box" twice to be runner-up in this department.

In scoring their second victory in as many nights over the Sea Gulls, the Eagles continued to flash a greatly improved brand of defensive hockey. Outstanding for the Eagles were diminutive Bill Lahti who was given his chance to play more regularly by the recent suspension of Bill Cairns and substitute Goalie Les Colvin who filled in for Gordon Lee for the second straight match.

Gulls Score First

The Sea Gulls scored first, at 3:54 of the first period on a desperate shot closely akin to Davies' winning goal. Center Chirp Brenchley slapped one past Colvin from about 25 feet out to climax the first real rush the Sea Gulls had been able to make against the bristling Washington defense.

Paul Courteau then deadlocked the score for the Eagles on a brilliant unassisted goal after threading his way through the entire Atlantic City team. Just as he unloosed his sizzling shot Courteau lost his balance and his jaunt ended with him sliding on his face into the end boards.

Eagles Meet Rovers

The Washington Eagles will seek to take the lead in their season series with the New York Rovers tomorrow night when they play host to the Eastern Amateur Hockey League pace-setters at Riverside Stadium in an 8:30 o'clock match.

The Eagles, despite scoring four goals in the final period, dropped their last meeting with the Rovers, 5-4, to even up the series at four victories apiece.

The Rovers return here a more formidable offensive machine than ever before, for Frank Boucher, jr., youthful center, has replaced Washington's Hal Dewey as the third-high scorer of the league. Now the Rovers have the top point-getting trio in the circuit with Al Collings and Murdo McKay occupying the first two positions.

Nelson Ties Hogan in Texas Open

271 Cards for 72 Holes Thrill 8,000 Fans in Attendance

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 11.—Byron Nelson, the national open champion, stormed in with gathering dusk today to tie Ben Hogan for first place in the $5,000 Texas open golf tournament with a 13-under-par 72-hole total of 271.

Silent Ben, White Plains, N. Y., professional, had finished 20 minutes earlier with his third 66 of the tournament to take a lead only Nelson thought wasn't safe.

Word buzzed back through the gallery of about 8,000 to Nelson that he needed a birdie on one of the last two holes to tie and he got it on the seventeenth.

Course Crowded

The 360-yard par four hole was packed with thousands, but Nelson soared his tee shot far over their heads, saw it take a big bounce in front of a trap guarding the green's entrance and skid onto the putting surface. He was down safely in two putts and then needed his par three on the 155-yard, par three eighteenth—a treacherous hole curling along a creek bank.

Nelson's crisp iron settled only 12 feet past the pin and the open champion did the expected—gambled for victory, not the tie. His putt bumbed into a corner of the hole and caromed out, 6 inches away.

Hogan, a little fellow with a tremendous power who has never won a major tournament but who hounds the winners, had just that same seventeenth hole for his most spectacular business.

Par Despite Penalty

Coming along five under par, he drifted his tee shot out of bounds into a river. Calmly, he teed up again and poked his second tee shot down the middle and on the green, a terrific shot that carried some 275 yards. He two putted for his par, despite the penalty shot.

Nelson could trace his success back to one magnificent shot on the ninth hole of the final round. This tee shot drifted over tall trees down to a sloping river bank. Backed against a tree, only a small opening for a target, Nelson stiff-armed a two-iron shot some 200 yards through the trees and to the edge of the ninth green for his par—probably the finest shot of the tournament.

Hogan had 66-73-66-66 for his total; Nelson, 68-67-69-67.

They will play off at 18 holes tomorrow afternoon.

Only a shot back was Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., who twice on his afternoon round became snarled in the woods of old Brackenridge Park's course to dim his chances at winning his first tournament since 1937.

Lawson Little, the former amateur ruler from Bretton Woods, N. H., who set a third round 73 but came back on the final go-around with a three-under-par 68 to grab third position.

Ed (Porky) Oliver, Hornell, N. Y., was fourth with 274.

But the most forlorn figure of the day was Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago, who took the 54-hole lead with a fine 67 third round. On the final 18, however, he blew his chances with an outgoing 39, three over par and could only get one stroke from par to finish with 275.

Ben Brown Kayo Victor Over Regan

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP). Ben Brown, 161, of Atlanta, Ga., knocked out Billy Regan, 176, of San Francisco, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout this afternoon.

Brown floored Regan once before he knocked him out with a right to the jaw.

Baseball Rules Body Meets With Judge Landis

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP).—The major league baseball rules committee will meet here tomorrow with Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis.

Expected to attend were Sam Breadon, of the St. Louis Cardinals; Bob Quinn, of the Boston Bees; Umpire Ernie Quigley and National League President Ford Frick for the senior circuit; American League President William Harridge, Eddie Collins, of the Boston Red Sox; Clark Griffith, of the Washington Senators, and Umpire Tom Connally for the junior loop.

Judge W. G. Branham, of Durham, N. C., president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, also is expected to be present.

Brown Meets McDonald at Arena Tonight

Natie Brown, the old District heavyweight "trial horse," will emerge from the moth balls again tonight to continue his latest comeback attempt in an eight-round bout with Sandy McDonald at Turner's Arena.

Brown, who is approaching the record Marty Gallagher established for retiring and returning to the ring, will be only a slight favorite over McDonald, big hard-hitting Irishman who is substituting for Mickey McAvoy.

In another eight-rounder Jim Webb, highly touted Dallas light-heavy, makes his local debut at the 175-pound weight against Johnny Kaplovich, of Baltimore.

Al Gilbert, local middleweight, will meet Ralph McGagin, of Jacksonville, in six rounds. There will be two four-round bouts.

C.U.'s Bearded Cagers Meet St. Peter's

Clash Tonight Gives Cards Chance for Victory After 9 Losses

Getting almost to the point where they're tripping over their beards, Catholic University's shaveless Cardinals will make another attempt to register their first basketball victory of the season tonight when they encounter St. Peter's at the C. U. gym. In the preliminary game, the C. U. freshmen, who have a slightly better record than their bigger brothers, oppose Devitt Prep.

The Cardinals have now gone to the post nine straight times without getting into the victory column and already have set an all-time record for C. U. basketball teams. It's hard to imagine that C. U. once was the basketball power of Washington but those days seem to be out of reach now if not gone forever.

One point will be in the Cards' favor tonight. They have been whipped to a fighting fury by the taunts over their poor season and now that the boys ..ave vowed not to shave until they win their first victory they have a further incentive to beat the Jersey City quintet.

That, however, may be wishful thinking because basketball is the chief occupation at St. Peter's and the Jersey City team annually is a candidate for the national tourney held at Madison Square Garden. The Cards had a good chance to scout St. Peter's in a recent doubleheader when C. U. played Fordham and the Saints played Seton Hall.

Coach Fod Cotton doesn't know how his boys will turn the trick but if constant drills and determination mean anything, St. Peter's may be in for a surprise tonight. If the Cards can click as they have at sporadic intervals, they may score the biggest upset of the season tonight.

Minor League Head Expels Two for Life

Action Against Lenoir, N. C. Club Taken By Bramham; Manager and Player Expelled; New Interests Take Franchise

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., Feb. 11.—In two sweeping decisions involving the Lenoir (N. C.) Club of the Tarheel League, William G. Bramham, czar of baseball's minor leagues, expelled a manager and a player from the game for life, suspended the president and directors of the club and warned everybody in professional baseball against future frauds.

Cleaning up the situation he apparently had referred to at the Cincinnati convention when he said baseball was "in the darkest spot since the Black Sox scandal," Bramham has imposed two fines aggregating $740 and placed President W. G. Courtney and five directors of the club on baseball's ineligible list for filing false and forged contracts for 41 players.

In a separate decision Bramham expelled from baseball Clarence P. Roper, who managed the team for half the 1939 season, and Mike Sime, because the latter played under an assumed name (Bob Wells) while on the ineligible list of the Wausau (Wis.) Club of the Northern League.

Knew Identity

It was in this connection that Bramham stated:

"Notice is given to all parties now or hereafter connected with professional baseball that conduct consisting of knowingly employing ineligible players or otherwise practicing frauds upon clubs, leagues or the National Association, will meet similar action."

Sime said in an affidavit to M. C. Campbell, president of the Class D Tarheel League, that he did not believe anyone connected with the Lenoir Club except Manager Roper knew his real identity.

As to the forged contracts which showed the club ostensibly paying players $80 to $125 a month when it actually was paying $90 to $250, Bramham said that all officials admitted this was done but all denied responsibility.

Records Disclose

"Out of the 41 contracts which this club filed during 1939, it is admitted and the records disclose," Bramham stated, "the contracts actually signed by the players called for $6,805 while the false and fraudulent contracts sent in by the club only called for $3,465."

Bramham added "the usual excuse of lack of knowledge of the rules and inexperience in professional baseball is offered" but imposed a punitive fine of $500 against the club "for this conduct of the club president" and imposed an additional $240 fine, representing 20 per cent of the salary limit ($1,200) of the Tarheel League.

He said except for the fact that new interests have taken over the Lenoir Club the franchise would have been forfeited.

Orioles Beat Rovers Twice, Near Loop Lead

Baltimore Wins First In New York, 7-6; Nightcap at Home, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 11.—The Baltimore Orioles took both ends of Eastern Amateur Hockey League doubleheader from the New York Rovers today, winning the first 7-6 in New York this afternoon and the second game here tonight, 4 to 2.

The wins sent the Orioles to within one point of a tie with the Rovers for the league championship.

Hunt counted for the Birds in the first three minutes tonight, and Grigor added another before Patrick scored for New York at 19:20. Pechet made it 2-2 early in the second period, but Dyte sent the Orioles ahead again at 16:16, and Calladine clinched the win late in the third.

A last-minute tally in the third period gave the Baltimore Orioles a victory in the opener before 12,687 fans.

Trailing 6-1 at the end of the second period, the Red Shirts stormed back to tie the score, after playing through two dull sessions.

The Rovers came to life after 4:29 and registered four times in less than three minutes shortly after, including their 200th goal of the season, which set a new league record.

Bill Moe, alert Oriole defenseman, scored the winning marker at 19:16 on relays from Guy Roach and Jack Riley.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 11 (AP).—Walter Bietila, of the famous Ishpeming, Mich., family, a former University of Wisconsin student, returned to the campus today and set a new hill record in winning class A of the Wisconsin Hoofers' Club ski tournament. Bietila leaped 105 feet on both attempts, breaking the record of 102 feet he set in winning last year's meet.

Fistiana's Critics Cry 'Cheese Champion,' but Louis Keeps Winning

By Whitney Martin

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Feb. 11.—It seems that Joe Louis' opponents, like the automobile, have come to stay, and the fact that two challengers in his nine title defenses did succeed in staying the limit brought forth on both occasions much acid comment to the effect that the champion is a bum.

When Tommy Farr, a battered chariot equipped with shock absorbers, stayed 15 rounds in Joe's first title defense, the cry went up that Louis was just a cheese champion with a vastly overrated punch.

Louis then proceeded to stop his next seven opponents, some of whom, it must be admitted, should have stopped before they got in the ring. Again Louis rode the crest as one of the great champions of all time.

Now, Arturo Godoy, a trailing arbutus from Chile, stays 15 rounds through the simple medium of transforming himself into a mustard plaster and flattening himself on Louis' chest, and again the wail goes up that Louis is slipping, that he has lost his punch, and that he couldn't carry the gloves for some of the great champions of the past.

It is generally agreed that Louis fought a poor fight against Godoy, and he is the first to admit it. However, we always labored under the impression that the object was to win, which Louis did, and the method need not be popular so long as it was effective.

They are saying that Jack Dempsey in his prime would have belted out Louis of the Godoy fight so fast the cameras would miss it, but we wouldn't be too sure. Louis looked bad because he was up against a freak style which no other champion was forced to face. There are crouchers, yes, but Godoy didn't crouch; he crawled. The pictures of the fight bear that out. We aren't so sure that Godby couldn't stay the limit with any man, past and present, if he followed the tactics used against Louis.

Joe is a robot fighter, implicitly following the instructions of his handlers. He doesn't meet the unexpected very well, and if an opponent digs when Joe has been told it would be a sag, he doesn't know quite what to do about it.

Obviously he was told to hold his punches until he got a clear shot, lest he shatter his hands on that bobbing, rock-hard head. He got few chances to let go, with the result his reputation as a dynamiter suffered. However, he won, and his hands are in good shape for his next bout, with Johnny Paychek April 3, so he can suffer a little verbal and written abuse.

It's pretty tough when, to be considered a champion, a man has to knock out everybody in sight. He may or may not be a great champion, but the fact remains Joe whips everybody they put in front of him, and if they don't measure up as challengers is that any fault of his? It's the old question: If he's no good, why doesn't someone beat him?

Godoy's showing has bolstered the spines of prospective Louis opponents, but it's only fair to warn them that if they fight an orthodox fight they're liable to wake up dead. We wouldn't write off the bomber as a dud because he had sense enough to pass up a chance for a possible knockout to save his hands.

He didn't look so good in winning, but the payoff is that he won, and he can afford to let Godoy get the plaudits for staying 15 rounds. Joe may be a bum, but a man who stays 15 rounds with him has accomplished quite a feat. It just doesn't make sense.

Brewers, Clippers Divide Home-and-Home Double-Header

Locals Win Here, 38-36; Lose, 38-31

Phil Rabin Big Star Of Twin Bill With Total of 32 Points; Resnick Joins Them

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Feb. 11.—Baltimore's Clippers, sparked by the timely scoring of Al Esposito and Bob Bollerman, came back before 5,000 fans at the Coliseum tonight to gain an even break in their American Basketball League double-header with the Washington Heurich Brewers, 38 to 31.

The Brewers had nosed out the Clippers in an afternoon game in Washington, D. C., 38 to 36.

Some 200 Washingtonians in attendance almost raised the roof in the last four minutes when Phil Rabin, credited with an 18-point scoring performance tonight, tied the count at 29-all. Esposito and Bollerman started rolling at this point, however, and Baltimore drove on to convincing victory.

Rabin's performance, incidentally, far outshone that of Baltimore's Bob McDermott, leading American League individual scorer, who accounted for seven points.

Baltimore had gained a 12-to-10 lead at the period and 24-to-18 mastery at the second intermission. Rabin, peppering in baskets from all angles, tied it up with four minutes to go, but Baltimore rallied at this point and put over the winning rally.

Resnick, formerly of New York University and a newcomer, joined the Brewers tonight and is expected to replace Dick Lee, veteran Heurich forward who is out for the season following an appendectomy.

Brewers Beat Clippers In Afternoon Game

Washington's Heurich Brewers barely lasted to defeat the Baltimore Clippers, 38 to 36, yesterday at the Heurich gymnasium in an American Pro league game. Boasting a 12 point lead at the end of the second period, the Brewers scored only six in the final period as the visitors made 16, to come within a basket of capturing the game.

Bob McDermott was bottled up during the encounter, and was only able to score one field goal and two free tosses. In the teams' last engagement, McDermott was leading scorer. He made up for his poor offensive work by playing an excellent floor game. Ben Kramer was best on defense for the Brewers.

Moe Dubilier set the scoring pace for the winners with 14 points, many of his baskets being long, looping shots from mid-court. Mike Bloom also helped the host cause by tallying eight points.

Al Esposito's flury of baskets in the last period led the late Clipper rally. All told he scored 12 points. Bob Bollerman of the visitors marked up nine.

The Clippers took a first period lead of 14-12, by virtue of shots by Schuckman, Bollerman, and Nash. In the second period the visitors attack was stymied and the locals forged to the front, and never relinguished the lead.

In a preliminary Heurich Amateur league game, the United Typewriter five beat Bantam Press, 38 to 33. Noonan and Mills lead the attack for the winners with 12 and nine points, respectively.

In the second preliminary of the afternoon an upset nearly occurred as undefeated Delaware & Hudson nosed out the Petworth A. C., 40 to 39.

Soccermen Resume Play in League; Clothiers Also Win

After several weeks of idleness, enforced by the sloppy weather, booters of the Washington and Suburban Soccer League finally got into action again yesterday.

Heurich Brewers romped into first place in the second half standings by trouncing Maryland Park, 5-1, on the Monument grounds. Two goals by R. McBain led in the victory. Regal Clothiers also remained unbeaten when they defeated La Plata on the latter's field, 4-1.

A pair of games between incomplete elevens were won by Washington Sport Club, 6-0, over Southern Maryland Democrats; and by Silver Spring over Sandy Spring, 7-2. Both the Sports Club and Democrats were forced to play with 10 men, while Sandy Spring could manage for only eight players.

Echoes of a Busy Week-End:

Competent trackmen today are hailing Georgetown's Al Blozis as a certainty to smash all existing records for the 16-pound shotput after watching the superbly built 20-year-old sophomore establish a new South Atlantic mark in the Fifth Regiment meet Saturday. E. J. Thompson, well-informed Navy coach, predicted the 6-foot 6-inch, 240-pound youngster should attain a maximum distance of 57 feet within the next two years. Which would constitute an indoor record likely to stand forever. The existing world indoor mark of 53 feet 1½ inches has stood since 1935 in favor of Jack Torrance, the Louisiana State roly-poly man.

MUNHALL

Elmer (Hap) Hardell, the usually pessimistic Georgetown coach, expects Blozis to lower Torrance's record Saturday night in the N. Y. A. C. games in New York. The modest little mentor who is turning in a great job in his first year as track coach at the Hilltop also believes his one-mile relay team will set a new school mark in its race Saturday.

With three consecutive victories behind them the Hoya quartet will meet its toughest opposition to date when it is pitted against Pittsburgh and Holy Cross in one section of an event which will send into action most of the crack mile foursomes of the country. Georgetown's best time was 3:21.6, made in the Millrose Games, but this will have to be bettered if the Hoyas are to win the cup from teams such as New York University and Fordham. The Violets boast three straight triumphs with times of 3:19.8, 3:22.4 and 3:24.9, while the Rams have turned the distance in 3:20.5 and 3:20.4.

Besides Blozis and the relayers Georgetown will have only one other entry in the N. Y. A. C. Games, Vincent Carnevale, sophomore miler. Carnevale, promising but woefully inexperienced, was entered in the collegiate mile at Baltimore Saturday mostly for seasoning, and he turned in a fine race. Closing fast, Carnevale just missed beating Virginia's Beverly Tucker for fourth place. As a matter of fact, Carnevale though he had finished third and was surprised when he was not awarded a medal. The third, fourth and fifth runners in the race finished blanket style.

Kehoe Victim of Luck

Jim Kehoe, Maryland's crack middle-distance runner, was a victim of unfortunate luck as he was nosed out in the Oriole 660 by Sanford Goldberg, the Flying Fireman from New York. Going into the third and final lap of the race, Kehoe swung out in an attempt to pass the Millrose ace and as he did Goldberg stepped off the inside of the track three different times. This could have resulted in his disqualification and a victory for Kehoe who, as it developed, was beaten a head in a sensational finish.

George Washington's 56-50 victory over Western Reserve, its thirteenth in 16 games, probably clinched Bill Reinhart's team a berth in the annual invitational championship tournament next month at Madison Square Garden. The Colonials have been aiming at this honor for several years but it has always faded in late season. Even the 1936-1937 G. W. team, considered by some as the school's all time best, didn't rate a bid.

Joe Frank, captain of Georgetown's first undefeated, untied football team in 1937, will finish up his studies at the Hilltop in June and then go looking for a coaching position. He has several strings out and may land at Seton Hall (N. J.) Prep . . . Fred Rice, jr., Gonzaga's star forward, probably will accept basketball scholarship at Catholic University next season . . . Young Rice has had several feelers from other colleges but his father who was once a great court coach for the Cardinals is believed to favor his enrollment at Brookland . . . The new George Washington line coach may be Ray Hanken, one of George Washington's greatest ends, who last year was appointed freshman mentor . . . Head Coach Reinhart thinks highly of Hanken's work and since Ray is a G. W.'s alumnus he seems to have first call for the job at present.

If members of the winless Catholic University basketball team persist in their promise not to shave until they score a victory they soon should be able to double for the House of David.

Ice Palace Girls Win in Bowling

Ice Palace girls swept their special bowling match with Franklin five, of Baltimore, last night, combining for a 1,638 to 1,610 margin in the team totals.

Mrs. Lucile Young turned in a stunning 80-pin victory over Franklin's ace, Ethel Brewer, rolling a 376 in the singles. And Stimmie Hart and Jessie Sacre, of Palace, beat out the invaders' Lowa Shanahan and Naomi Zimmerman, 671 to 631.

Collegians Defeat Nevers' Pro Stars

San Francisco, Feb. 11 (INS).—Kenny Washington's Collegians defeated Ernie Nevers' Professional Stars, 21 to 0, in a postseason charity football game today in San Francisco's Kezar Stadium. Ten thousand fans under clear skies saw Washington, great Negro All-American halfback, from U. C. L. A., pace his charges, scoring two of the collegians' three touchdowns.

Pitcher Jack Kallio Signed by Portland

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 11 (AP).—The Portland Beavers reached into the second generation for a baseball pitcher today.

The club signed Jack Kallio, right-hander, whose father, Rudy, hurled for various Pacific Coast League clubs and once wore a Detroit Tiger uniform.

Portland also traded Eddie Wilson, outfield, to Chattanooga for Al Browne, an outfielder for Oakland last season.

Capitol Casino Triumphs in Roller Hockey

Score Lopsided 12-1 Victory Over Chester Club as Graham Stars

Capitol Casino, Washington's entry in the newly formed Eastern Roller Hockey Association, scored one of the most one-sided triumphs in its short career yesterday on the local floor, beating the Great Leagards, of Chester, Pa., 12-1. The visitors' only point came in the final period.

The D. C. teams' most productive period was the second, in which it tallied six points. Law and Sugrue rang up two goals apiece to lead in the spree. In all Sugrue registered five goals, his biggest help coming from George Graham.

Don Graham, stellar goalie, turned in a fine defensive performances with 20 saves and a single goal scored against him.

With its victory, the Casino moved within a half game of the league-leading Newbergh, N. Y., Club. Next week the team plays its last game of the season away from home, after which four clashes on the local court are scheduled.

Lamb Wins 2 Skate Events; Ties Leighton

Today's Race Will Determine Lake Placid Winner

By the Associated Press

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Delbert Lamb, of Milwaukee, Wis., flashed home ahead of the field in two events today to vault into a first-place tie with Charles Leighton, of Minneapolis in Lake Placid's diamond trophy speed skating competition.

Both men have a total of 70 points with two races remaining on the card tomorrow. Ted Ellenwood, of Fort Johnson, N. Y., northern New York star, was far back in third place with 30 points.

Lamb overtook the field in the home stretch of the 220 after Ellenwood, leading most of the way, faltered at the finish. Leighton, also coming up fast, nipped Ellenwood at the tape for second place. The time was 19.1, fast, considering the high wind which swept the mirrow lake ice.

Close Finish

After trailing Leighton all the way in the one mile, Lamb broke away coming around the final turn to win by inches from the sturdily-built Minneapolis speedster. Bob Heckenback, of Chicago, was third.

Leo Freisinger, of Chicago, who unleased a final spurt last week-end to capture the North American championship from Lamb by ten points and became a pre-meet favorite for the diamond trophy, was forced to the sidelines today by a severe cold and is a doubtful starter in tomorrow's events.

Dick Werner, of Paterson, N. J., took a wide lead over the senior men's field in the northern New York championship, breaking the tape ahead of Vic Ronchetti, of Chicago, in both the 440 and 3-mile races. The New Jersey veteran brought his point total to 90, with Ronchetti in second place at 60 and Bill Shannon, of Troy, third with 30.

Good Margin

Louise Herou, of Minneapolis, favorite to take the senior women's crown, added the half-mile to her victories in the 220 and three-quarter mile yesterday for 90 points and a safe lead over Virginia Jahn, of Creskill, N. J., who got 40 points by virtue of a second in the half-mile.

John Mahoney, of Minneapolis, jumped far in the lead in the intermediate boys' division with 90 points by taking a narrow victory over Art Vandyke, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in the 220. Dick Dost, of Cleveland, Mahoney's nearest threat, failed to place and remained in second place with 40.

Bunny Lawler, of Chicago, proved far superior in the intermediate girls' class, sprinting home ahead in the 440 and one-half mile today to go 30 points ahead of Rose Steininger, Saratoga.

O'Toole, Garibaldi Meet Thursday

Tommy O'Toole and Ralph Garibaldi yesterday were signed to scrap in the final preliminary of Thursday night's wrestling show at Turners Arena, it was announced. They will engage in a 30-minute time limit affair.

Bennett, Cricket Umpire of D. C., Dies

Washington's cricket colony was deeply saddened yesterday when Secertary Alfred Wynne, of the Washington Cricket Club, announced receipt of a cable revealing the death of Edmund Bennett, umpire for the club for the past two years, in County Leicestershipe, England.

Bennett was 76 years of age. He was the father of Harold Bennett, present captain of the Cricket Club, and a former star player in his own right. During his stay in the United States the elder Bennett made numerous friends in Baltimore and Philadelphia, most of them through his love for cricket.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 11.—This will depress Arturo Godoy, and perhaps floor him for the first time in his career—for it slugs him in his one vulnerable spot, his wallet pocket.

Neither he nor Joe Louis will share in the tidal wave of profits out of the South American showing of the Louis-Godoy fight films. Through Mike Jacobs, they sold all rights to the film before the fight, at a very low figure, for no one connected with the deal expected the films to do much better than break even. The 15-to-1 odds (4-to-1 that Louis would flatten him) hammered the flat price of the film rights down to a new low.

CONSIDINE

Now it seems likely that the one-hour film will make a million in South America alone, where it will be shown as "proof" that the South American was robbed. The robbery build-up will be played down in this country, for there wasn't an American sportswriter at the ringside the other night who had the gall or astigmatism to write that Godoy won the fight. The concensus was that Louis won 10 of the rounds and rated a draw in two others.

* * * *

But the South American boys, overly thrilled by the sight of a countryman remaining upright (so to speak) long after he was destined to be horizontal, sent out word that indicated that only the most vicious type of skullduggery deprived Godoy of the title.

La Nacion, big Buenos Aires paper, told its readers editorially that "Louis got the smelly benefit of the doubt." El Chileno, Santiago paper, headlined "Godoy was robbed." Another Chilean paper said that Arthur Donovan stole the title from Godoy. The extensive short-wave broadcast, which was rebroadcast in Buenos Aires alone by four sations, was pro-Godoy, of course.

The report is that the Louis-Godoy films will be doctored for South American consumption only in that the order of the rounds will be scrambled and that the third and ninth rounds, which Godoy won handily, will become the fourteenth and fifteenth—and send our Latin cousins out of the theaters in a mood to declare war on the U. S.

* * * *

Luis Angel Firpo knows what a rich pasture South America is for a fight film which stars a South American. Not long after he came to this country he fought some bum in Jersey City and got $125 for the fight. For some reason, pictures were made of the match and before they had finished running in South America they had made him $125,000, for he owned the South American rights to them.

Max Schmeling made a separate deal with Jack Dietz, who also owns the Louis-Godoy pictures, before his first Louis fight, whereby he was to get half the profits on the showings in Germany of the films. The films, of course, turned out to be sensational and after a furious run throughtout Germany Schmeling informed Dietz that Dietz's share of the profits—by that time held in a German bank and forbidden release—was $62,000, a sum which made Dietz wonder just how much Schmeling made.

Unable to get the money out of Germany, Schmeling paid off Dietz in a microscopic way by bringing loads of cameras with him on his trips to this country. But after the second Louis fight Dietz knew he probably would never see the Dutchman again, so the day they carried Max from the hospital to the Bremen Dietz arrived with a sheriff and a court order to hold Schmeling here until he settled. The boys settled.

* * * *

Max had $38,000 in cash with him, the residue of an enormous roll which Uncle Sam and Uncle Mike had shaved down to comparatively transparent thinness. Dietz took $31,000 of it, but when Max got back to Germany the bank wouldn't release that $31,000 from the $62,000 Max had put in the bank as Dietz's piece. The bank demanded that Dietz come to Germany to claim it in person—an invitation which the Hebraic Mr. Dietz turned down without thanks.

All of which brings us back to the fact that the $13,540 which Godoy earned by fighting Louis (with various cuts and taxes that sum will shrink to perhaps $5,000) is only a timid bit of the enormous profits which will be derived from the South American showings of the films—in which he has no financial interest.

2,738 Dogs on Scent of 'Best' Award as Garden Show Opens

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—Tomorrow morning the first of 2,738 dogs, each a selected specimen of his breed, highly groomed and trained to look and act his best, will start parading through the rings at Madison Square Garden in the sixty-fourth annual show of the Westminster Kennel Club. Sometime Wednesday night just one of them will be left standing alone to receive the most coveted ribbon of them all and the applause of the crowd.

Numerically the entry list isn't the biggest in Westminster history and it falls far short of the entry at the annual Morris and Essex Club outdoor show. This year's winner of the best-in-show award, however, will be someone special in the dog world. He will be conqueror not only of the best American bred dogs, but of a large number which have been imported from Europe since the beginning of the war.

U. S. Breeding at Stake

This international aspect lends unusual interest to the show, for many breeders and handlers believe the Westminster this year will prove that American dogs hold their own in any kind of show company. In the past it was considered that almost a sure way to win blue ribbons was to buy one of England's leading performers, usually at a good stiff price.

The handsome Doberman Pinscher, CH. Ferry von Rauhfelsen of Giralda, which went best in show last year, is not eligible to compete because his former owner, Mrs. M. Hartley Dodge, is one of the judges. Nevertheless there will be three of last year's group winners in the list and 35 winners of best-of-breed ribbons last February.

Heading the lists are the black cocker spaniel, CH. My Own Brucie, owned by Herman Mellenthin, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Champion Norway Saddler, James M. Austin's smooth fox terrier, and Mrs. William duPont's beagle, CH. Meadowlark Draftsman. They were, respectively, the best sporting dog, best terrier and best hound in the 1939 show. My Own Brucie was awarded the James Mortimer Memorial Torphy last year as Westminster's best American-bred dog and Meadowlark Draftsman earned a special award as the year's outstanding home-bred on the basis of victories scored in all shows.

Daro Stands Out

Another notable entry is the English setter Daro of Maridor, owned by Dwight Ellis, which was best in show as a puppy two years ago. He was taken seriously ill shortly after that triumph but recovered on Ellis' Southern hunting preserve and is starting a comeback to compete against his litter mate, Maro of Maridor, now owned by Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke.

The judging of about 100 different breeds, ranging alphabetically from Affenpinschers to Yorkshire Terriers, takes up most of the first two days. On the final day the arena will be made into one big ring for judging of the variety groups and such interesting sidelights as obedience trials and judging the hound packs.

Heurich Cards Triple-Header

One of the crucial games of the second-half Heurich Amateur Basketball League schedule is booked in the 9:30 o'clock end of a triple-header at Heurich Gymnasium tonight when Delaware & Hudson meets United Typewriters.

In supporting numbers the Jewish Community Center's Big Five engages United Clay Products at 7:30 o'clock and Federal Bureau of Investigation opposes Regal Clothiers at 8:30.

United Typewriters, one of the highest-scoring amateur teams Washington has boasted of recent years, will be conceded a fine chance of upsetting D. & H. tonight. Prominent among the players featured by the Typewriters will be Bill Noonan, veteran forward and center, who set a new Heurich Gymnasium scoring record with 39 points recently.

Noonan, Ollie Tipton, Lenny Mills, Soup Hancock, Len Stanton and Gay Edelin are numbered among the Typewriter stars who will see action tonight. Gerald Burns, Tommy Folliard, Bobby Lucas, George Walker and Akky Viana are the "iron men" who have started and finished a majority of Delaware & Hudson's games.

William and Mary's Five 42-31 Winner

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 11 (AP).—William and Mary's cagers, hard pressed in the first period, drew away in the last half to defeat Hampden-Sydney, 42 to 31.

The Tigers kept within striking distance of the sharp-shooting Tribesmen during the first 20 minutes of play, and the Indians were pushed to obtain a 20-15 margin at half time.

Bobby Riggs Captures Third Straight Net Title in Miami

Mulloy Bows in 3 Sets; Pauline Betz Takes Women's Crown

By the Associated Press

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 11.—Bobby Riggs of Chicago, national amateur tennis champion, won his third consecutive winter tournament today by breezing through Garnar Mulloy of Miami, 6-0, 7-5, 6-2, in the Roney Plaza finals.

Pauline Betz of Hollywood, Calif., upset the women's division by defeating Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Boston, the Nation's third-ranking player, 7-5, 6-4. Miss Betz is ranked eighth.

Miss Betz, displayed the finest woman's backhand seen here in a long while, outsteadied Mrs. Fabyan, who appeared to tire toward the last.

Charles Hare and Mary Hardwick, the British team, won the mixed doubles division, defeating Jack Mahoney of New York and Doris Hart of Miami, 6-2, 6-3.

BOBBY RIGGS

College Hockeyman in Debut Here Tonight

Collegiate ice hockey, as played by Georgetown University and Loyola of Baltimore, makes its debut at Riverside Stadium tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Recognized officially by the school for the first time although it played several games last season, the Hoya sextet will start a line-up comprised of former New England and New York scholastic stars.

Jim Graham, formerly an all-high choice with Boston College High School, captains the Georgetown club. Graham plays left wing and is an aggressive competitor and a fine scorer. Other outstanding Georgetown players are the Deegan brothers, Bill and Frank, and Jack Ryan, Art Feenan and Frank Mulcahy.

Public skating will follow the match, speed skating races will be offered before the game and between periods.

Lady Maryland, D. C.-Owned Mare, Out of $50,000 Widener

6-Year-Old To Get Rest Until Bowie

Trainer Bedwell Says Star Needs Freshening; Big Stakes Are Magnet

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 11.—Lady Maryland, owned by Gustave Ring of Washington, D. C., and voted the outstanding handicap mare of 1939, is out of the $50,000 added Widener and $10,000 added McLennan Memorial, Trainer L. G. (Buster) Bedwell has announced.

Bedwell stated that Lady Maryland has not been herself, and is apparently in need of a rest. The 6-year-old gray daughter of Sir Greysteel and Palestra will be thrown out of training and brought back in time for Bowie spring racing.

Although, many have tried, no thoroughbred has been able to bring off the big double for older horses—McLennan and Widener. It is a double worth winning by any high mettle racer, or his owner for that matter.

When it was added to the long list of sweepstakes at beautiful Hialeah Park, the McLennan was named in memory of "Little Joe" McLennan, former racing secretary of the Miami Jockey Club and the father of Charles J., present incumbent.

Serves as Trial

By fixing the distance at 1 mile and a furlong, and carding on the program a fortnight before The Widener, the McLennan Memorial is the last important public trial for candidates for the closing-day event.

It always brings out a large field, and furnishes a stirring contest. Undoubtedly, the most sensational, perhaps the most talked of race ever run at Hialeah Park, was last year's McLennan renewal, in which Col. Maxwell Howard's Stagehand made such a spectacular finish. For the son of Sickle and Stagecraft, apparently hopelessly out of it at the head of the stretch, came up with a whirlwind rush to win on the wire from Calumet Farm's Bull Lea, and B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King. Although, he ran gallantly in The Widener, Stagehand wasn't so fortunate, or maybe the other race had taken too much out of him, for the best he could do was finish third to Bull Lea and Sir Damion.

Out of the 78 nominations for the McLennan Memorial, which will have its sixth running on February 17, 42 are eligible for The Widener. Of course, the most discussed candidate at the moment is Col. Maxwell Howard's The Chief, which won so impressively at Hialeah Park recently that shrewd observers suggest that lightning might strike twice in the same place for the Dayton sportsman.

Technician Is Hope

Another McLennan and Widener hope is Herbert M. Woolf's Technician, winner of the Flamingo Stakes here a year ago. The son of Insco, which has been away from the races since last July, made an impressive showing in his first start here. Another expected to do much is the Belair Stud's Olympus, which raced in England until last autumn.

The entries include: Marshall Field's Sir Damion, which won the rich and historic Dixie Handicap at Pimlico after running so well in The Widener; the Brandywine Stable's Masked General; Calumet Farm's Easy Mon; I. Bieber's Chilean-breds, Confiado and Conde Rico; B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King, which is going to make another try in both events; Mrs. Elizabeth Graham Lewis' Great Union; the Greentree Stable's Day Off, Yes or No, and Equilibrium; Maemere Farm's Maeda; Leo J. Marks' Many Stings; J. B. Partridge's Miami Beach Handicap winner, Sandy Boot; Gustave Ring's Charlotte Girl, the Wheatley Stable's Stormscud and Sea Captain; Circle "M" Ranch's Shining One and Bootless, and Parker Corning's Chip In.

Like so many of the important races at Hialeah Park, a challenge cup goes with the winning of the McLennan. It is a handsome silver cup, originally an old English racing trophy, donated by Joseph E. Widener.

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

Far be it from me to say that Bowie is just around the corner, but it is creeping up on us. Brother Farrell, the general manager, has sent along the stake book. Four big races are listed for the meeting. This schedule includes the $5,000 added Rowe Memorial Handicap (formerly the Inaugural) for 3-year-olds and up at 6 furlongs on opening day, April 1; the $5,000 added Bowie Handicap for 3-year-olds and up at a mile and 70 yards on April 6; the $2,500 added Bowie Kindergarten Stakes for 2-year-olds at 4 furlongs on April 10 and the $5,000 added Southern Maryland Handicap for 3-year-olds and up at a mile and a sixteenth on April 13. Mrs. Payne Whitney, first lady of the turf, whose Greentree Stable has been rather in the background in recent years, has two first-flight threats for the $20,000 Flamingo Stake on February 24. She has Red Dock, winner of the $5,000 added Bahmas Handicap, to toss at the other owners. As if this colt wasn't enough, she also has Yes or No, an aptly named son of Questionnaire and a big-bodied short-coupled horse. Yes or No worked impressively at Saratoga last summer but would not run back to the trials. Trainer Gave looked around for the reason and finally located it in an ailing foot. He was forced to cut away and the colt grew a new hoof. The trainer's patience was rewarded last week when the colt bounced home by himself. Young Joe Stevens (Charles Town fans will remember him as in charge at the recent meetings of the concessions) has taken the former Frances Elizabeth Pine as a bride. Jockey Herbert Dabson, who prefers to be called "Rabbit," has had a mount at the meeting, his first since he was seriously injured at Saratoga last summer. He expects to take it easy until Bowie. W. B. Streett, who trains for Mrs. Barclay K. Douglas, of New York, has purchased the contract of Jockey Albert Schmidt. Confucius say: Sundodger a shade the best in fifth.

BILL.

First race—Perigee breaks in the clear from the outside post position and will be ready to do a lot of running in this field of maiden juveniles. Alfred Robertson will do the riding and I'm going to string along. French Vamp is recommended by fast trials and is dangerous. Within may be third.

Second race—Baltee could not stay after setting the pace last out on an off track. With everything pointing to a fast course for this event, I'm going to go back to this one. Takeitfrome had that last race taken from him according to observers. However, the officials were forced to string along with the camera. This 3-year-old will be a threat. Gamester to fill out the money circle.

Third race—Sugarage appears best placed of these veteran sprinters. Gets in light and will have Apprentice Packer up. Reminiscent and Pause are good now and will be in the thick of contention.

Fourth race—Kayteekel has been passed along as a maiden with plenty of speed. The capable Irvin Anderson is due for the booting job and I see no reason for mistakes Dog House and Bull Ring to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Town Boy will like the 108 pounds in this sprint. Durando will ride and I'm going to be there for the pay-off. Ship Biscuit and Liberty Queen are good and deserve plenty of attention.

Sixth race—Count Morse, with Flinchum up, promises to be prominent in the day's feature. I believe this combination will click. Technician, coupled with Joe Schenck, is sharp and ready for the best. Mar Le gets in light.

Seventh race—Dissembler, on general good recent form, deserves top ranking in company of this caliber. Carries 116 pounds, but likes the route. Conrad Mann earns plenty of oats in similar races and is dangerous. Play Gold to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Topnotcher, tossed in this with a feather assignment, promises to show a lot of speed and I believe he can hold the opposition safe. Des Grieux, another lightweight, is due to be a keen factor. Red Chief should be in the pay circle.

Best bet—Town Boy.

Hoyas Face Mountaineer Five Tonight

Invaders Boast Six Triumphs in 9 Games; Rizzi, Pajak Featured

Georgetown University's improved basketball team will be subjected to a strong test tonight when it meets West Virginia in the twenty-second game of their traditional series at 8:30 o'clock at Tech gym.

The Mountaineers are reported to have their finest team in recent years and boast six victories in nine games. Among their victims are Carnegie Tech, Temple, West Virginia Wesleyan and Bethany.

A pair of gifted sophomores, Jimmy Ruch and Rudy Baric, together with veteran and co-captain "Flash" Brooks have been supplying the big punch for West Virginia. The trio has accounted for 243 of the 387 points the team has scored.

Georgetown will depend on a pair of juniors, Irving Rizzi and George Pajak who lately have been setting a fast scoring pace to provide the necessary attack. Rizzi scored 17 points against Temple in his last appearance while Pajak blossomed out as a star on the Hoyas' recent trip into New York State, being especially outstanding as Georgetown upset Army.

In a preliminary game scheduled for 7 o'clock the Georgetown Frosh will meet Bolling Field.

Spiders' Trip Should Settle Va. Court Race

Leading Richmond Team to Play V. M. I. And W. & L. in 2 Days

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Feb. 11.—The University of Richmond basketball team leaves tomorrow for a trip to Lexington which may settle the spirited State cage championship race for 1940.

The Spiders meet V. M. I. on Monday night and then play Washington and Lee in the game-of-the-week on Tuesday. Neither Richmond nor the Generals have been defeated in the State and each has annexed three "big six" scalps.

Last week's surprising skirmishes saw Virginia's favored Cavaliers take two beatings, one at William and Mary and another last night from Washington and Lee at Lynchburg, 33 to 30. Virginia was at full strength for the Williamsburg upset but Bill Harman, the State's high scoring player, was absent from the line-up against Washington and Lee due to illness.

The Generals have two other tough opponents to play this week, entertaining William and Mary on Thursday and traveling to Duke's new gymnasium for an important Southern Conference tilt on Saturday. Richmond plays host to Virginia in another prospective thriller on Friday.

A tie for the title relinquished by Roanoke after two years' reign is the best Virginia can do now with three "big six" victories against two losses on the record.

Richmond's only setback in nine games this season came against Maryland. Washington and Lee has been defeated twice in a dozen appearances, losing to Georgetown and Wake Forest.

The Washington and Lee squad has the best scoring record, averaging 38.4 points per game while yielding only 30. Richmond and Virginia have averaged 37.6 points a game.

State standings:

	W.	L.	P.	P.A.
Richmond	8	1	338	287
Washington and Lee	10	2	461	361

Five College Fives Take Regional Honors

N. Y. U., Southern Calif., Colorado, Duke And Oklahoma Aggies Far Ahead Of Foes as Result of Week's Play

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—Although they are widely separated geographically, there is a similarity between New York University, Southern California, Oklahoma A. & M., Duke and Colorado.

They have far and away the best basketball teams in their regions.

The suspicion has been all along that such was the case, but recent developments have proven it beyond a doubt.

New York University's clean-cut 32-43 victory over Notre Dame's fine outfit Saturday in the Garden before 18,070 was all the critics needed to stamp the Violets with the adjective "great." That, coupled with Long Island's defeat by Duquesne earlier, also settled the problem of which was the best metropolitan team.

Southern California, pride of the Pacific Coast, started off like a champion—and has continued to improve. The undefeated Trojans' most recent sample of their defensive prowess—the thing that has made them feared from coast to coast—came when they beat U. C. L. A., 60-26, Friday.

Carr Applauds

Colorado, though beaten once, was called "the best team Frosty Cox ever produced" by no less an authority than former Sportswriter Ralph L. Carr, now the State's Governor, on a visit here last week.

Oklahoma's Aggies have won eight straight and something like 43 consecutive games on their home court, to end all argument in the Missouri Valley. And Duke came through with a brilliantly-fashioned 50-44 decision over North Carolina to take the top spot in the Southern Conference. It's still a race down there, but if the Blue Devils continue to improve, they'll breeze in.

Elsewhere, however, there still seems to be plenty of reason for playing out the schedules, for the races are close. One of the best is in the Big Ten where Indiana upset Purdue to tie for the lead but tied-for-second Illinois, Michigan, Northwestern and Ohio State aren't out of it yet.

Situation By Sections:

East: While there's no longer any lingering doubt that New York University's Violets are the best independent team in the East, there is all kinds of doubt about the Eastern League's best. At the moment, Dartmouth's defending champions are on top, but neither second place Princeton nor third place Cornell has any long-term leases on those positions. Dartmouth's twin wins over Harvard and Yale plus Cornell's crushing of Pennsylvania highlighted the week's play. A 7 game program, with Cornell booked to meet Yale, Dartmouth and Harvard, is on tap.

South: Duke dumped North Carolina, 50-44 to take the Southern Conference lead—and all its plaudits. The Tarheels' defeat was the second in ten games and stamped the durable Dukes as the best team in the region. The league leaders are busy this week facing Clemson, Wake Forest and Washington & Lee. In the Southeastern Conference, league leading Tennessee with only one victory so far gets rolling this week, meeting Alabama and Kentucky, those two enemies that battled in last week's feature, won by Kentucky 46-18. That dropped 'Bama out of second place, a position now held by Mississippi State which jumped up from sixth by winning from Mississippi, 50-46 and 47-35 and Tulane, 54-38.

Indiana Is Busy

Midwest: The Big Ten is tied up like a piece of rope at a Boy Scout convention. Indiana, which beat Purdue, 46-39, to share top spot with the Boilermakers must meet Michigan and Northwestern this week, while Purdue plays cellar-place Chicago and rip-snorting Illinois, led by Bill Hapac, who against Michigan Saturday set a new Big Ten scoring mark of 34 points. Behind the leaders, tied for second and still in the running are Illinois, Michigan, Northwestern and Ohio State.

Missouri Valley: Ho, hum. The Oklahoma Aggies won three more last week, one of them a 45-20 victory over Washburn for No. 43 without a loss on the home court. Drake is a half game ahead of Creighton in the race for second place.

Big Six: Oklahoma broke its first place tie with Missouri by defeating Nebraska, 45-28 and meets the Tigers Tuesday. Sooner star Jimmy McNatt's 30 points in the Nebraska rout set a conference mark.

Colorado Leading

Rocky Mountain: Colorado continues to stay ahead of the pack, its last victory a 50-34 crusher over Wyoming. Utah State, in second place heads a busy week meeting both Utah and Brigham Young.

Southwest—Texas kept on top of the parade by a 51-47 shellacking of Baylor while Arkansas had fun with S. M. U.—by 75-40, and 36-26. Texas plays T. C. U. in the week's feature, although the Horned Frogs also have an important date with the Baylor Bears. Second-place Rice was idle.

Pacific Coast—In the southern sector, it's not even a contest any more, with U. S. C.'s Trojans a mile ahead of the pack. That 60-26 walloping the Southern Cal's handed U. C. L. A. was the title-clincher, along with California's surprising win over Stanford by 38-36. U. S. C. and California play a double bill this week-end that tops the schedule. In the northern division, Oregon State lengthened its lead by splitting a pair with Washington State. Washington, after losing six straight, including one to Idaho, which broke Idaho's 22-game losing streak, finally won the second test, 56-48. Washington State and Oregon play Monday and Tuesday, with both needing the victories to stay in the race, and Saturday Oregon State invades Oregon for a titanic tussle.

Miami-Nassau Yacht Race Draws 4 Craft

Stormy Weather, Favored in Lipton Event, Is Threatened

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11.—Fourteen sailing yachts, most of them contestants in the Sir Thomas Lipton Race won yesterday by an outsider, will compete Tuesday in the seventh Miami-Nassau ocean race.

Tejeria, Theodore G. Hoster's cutter flying the burgee of the Gibson Island Yacht Club, Baltimore, won the 28-mile Lipton event in the corrected time of 4 hours, 32 minutes, 40 seconds. It nosed out the favored Stormy Weather, victor last year and winner for three years of the Nassau race, by a scant 12 minutes.

Stormy Weather, 54-foot yawl owned by William La Brot, of Annapolis, Md., led the way around the triangular course and was first to cross the finish line, but lost the winner's role on the basis of corrected time. The tiny 26-foot cutter, Vandal, was third.

Neither Tejeria nor Vandal have entered the Nassau event. Stormy Weather's string of victories is threatened by a newcomer, Good News, 65-foot yawl owned by Robert W. Johnson, of New York, a fast, expensive craft that was forced out of the Lipton race by a minor grounding the previous day.

Good News has never sailed in competition, but she was designed with a weather eye on just such events as the Nassau race. Johnson formerly owned Stormy Weather, but sold her after Good News was launched.

Other entries range from the 72-foot, clipper-bowed Tioga, entered by Harry E. Noyes, of Marblehead, Mass., to the 35-footer Grace, a sloop owned by Everest McDade, of Miami.

Duke Cagers Top Southern Conference

North Carolina Dropped to Second Place by Leaders

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Feb. 11.—The Duke University basketball team held undisputed possession of top position in the Southern Conference today as the nip-and-tuck campaign gave promise of a rousing championship tournament at the close of this month.

North Carolina was topped to the second spot by the Blue Devils' 50-44 triumph last night. Washington and Lee and Richmond are tied with four victories each in five loop contests.

Other teams which have broken even or better are Clemson, Wake Forest, Maryland and The Citadel. The eight ranking clubs after two more weeks of battling will be selected to compete for the title at Raleigh, N. C.

Of the 15 members, only Virginia Tech definitely has been eliminated as a tourney candidate. The Gobblers have won but one tilt in eight and have only two remaining as the result of the cancellation of a trip to North Carolina this week.

V. M. I. and N. C. State will need an uninterrupted string of successes to qualify for the title event. A heavy schedule of 16 conference games will help shape up the tournament field and whittle down the number of contenders.

Duke faces the most active week, meeting Clemson's 1939 champions on Monday, Wake Forest on Thursday and Washington and Lee in a headliner at Durham on Saturday. The Blue Devils also swing out of the loop Tuesday to play Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

North Carolina has only one test, at N. C. State Friday. Richmond travels to V. M. I. and W. and Lee on Monday and Tuesday. William and Mary plays at W. and L. in another big scrap for the Old Dominion on Thursday.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Misha Levitzki in a piano recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program: Sonata in A major (Scarlatti), Melody (Gluck-Sgambati), Sonata in F minor, Op. 57 (Beethoven), Impromptu in F sharp major, Waltz in A flat major, Op. 34; Fantasy-Impromptu, Preludes in A major and F major, Scherzo in C sharp minor (Chopin), "Jeux d'eau" (Ravel), Waltz in A major (Levitzki), "La Campanella" (Paganini-Liszt).

At his recital in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon, Misha Levitzki had a large and cordially disposed assemblage of auditors whose approbation was evidently cumulative, judging from the quantity and quality of the applause. His first group was received politely but with a certain amount of reserved judgment, and it was not until the Chopin group was in progress that the demonstrations became warm. Enthusiasm mounted during this portion of the program, and grew so marked that he added two extra numbers to the group. Of the pieces in his concluding group he was obliged to repeat his own ingratiating waltz, and there were insistent demands for more after "La Campanella."

Levitzki Retains Skill

Those of us who heard Mr. Levitzki during his first tour some 20 years ago recall that he played as well then as he does today. A precocious virtuoso, he excited the hope that his technical prowess was the outward sign of a musicianship in the early stages of development. He has retained all his skill and has made fluency a habit, but in his readings yesterday he did not reveal, at least to one listener, the compelling eloquence which denotes a master artist. To what extent he has spiritually matured one has no way of knowing, and he may have a wisdom which he does not project to his hearers.

The major work on his program was Beethoven's Opus 57, that magnificent sonata ineptly called the "Appassionata," as though Beethoven had never elsewhere been impassioned while writing for the piano. Mr. Levitzki's technical grasp of the work was excellent and it took clear form under his fingers, but the spirit of Beethoven was not in it. One missed in the first movement the revelation of its poetic motive—the struggle between strength and weakness, the conflict between will and conscience. The slow movement had beauty of tone but lacked persuasiveness. As a whole the reading of the sonata fell short of its emotional content.

Chopin Most Appealing

His most appealing playing was done in the pieces by Chopin with whose texts he took occasional liberties. Here his sympathy with the music was most obvious and his insight the most penetrative. He made salient both the hectic flush of the style and the morbidezza of the harmonic modulations.

From a pianist of Mr. Levitzki's attainments one would like to hear a recital more indicative of a curiosity about the literature of the instrument. His program was disappointing in its conventionality and its avoidance of the slightest novelty. While his waltz may have been unfamiliar to some of his auditors, it is by no means new, and it has been paid the compliment of performance by many other pianists.

Society Hears Izac Uphold Papal Embassy

St. Vincent de Paul Group Told Move Is Not Political in Aim

Representative Edouard V. M. Izac (Democrat), of California, yesterday praised President Roosevelt's appointment of Myron Taylor as his representative at the Vatican.

He told members of the Particular Council of the St. Vincent de Paul Society at their quarterly breakfast meeting that the Chief Executive should be commended, rather than criticized, for trying to effect peace through Pope Pius XII, whom he called "one of the greatest influences for peace today."

The President's efforts should not be construed as "political window dressing," the legislator pointed out to the men, who earlier heard reports on charitable work from some 30 Catholic parishes in the Washington area.

George J. Cleary, president of the Particular Council, presided at the session in the parish school hall of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Second and C streets northeast. The annual mass memorializing departed members preceded the breakfast. Msgr. Edward P. McAdams, host rector, serving as celebrant.

Among the guests were John Hadley Doyle, 83-year-old secretary of the council; Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, spiritual director of the society, and head of the Catholic Charities; Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, active worker in the society and president of the Washington Section of the League of Laymen's Retreats, and others. Several women also attended.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society does charitable work in Catholic parishes throughout the world. It has 150,000 members.

IN MEMORIAM.

HARRIS, ALBERT. In sad but loving remembrance of our dear father, ALBERT HARRIS, who died three years ago today.
We do not forget you, dear father, nor do we intend;
We think of you often, and will to the end.
BY HIS DAUGHTERS.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"I thought it might be interesting to you," writes R. H. B. in submitting today's hand, "because it combines (1) clearing a suit, with (2) the throw-in for an endplay, and (3) creating an entry to the set-up cards, all in a single lead.

The bidding:

2 ◇	3 ♣	Pass	3NT
Pass	Pass	Dbl	Pass

Opening lead: 5 ◇.

"North's three clubs is a rubber-saving desperation," he continues. "South's three no trump is not too hopeful, and is based mostly on the idea of having the diamonds led up to rather than through. And, if North has some descent clubs, maybe there's a chance of making it.

"Needless to say, one look at the dummy was quite disheartening. The first trick went: The five of diamonds, the six, the jack, the king. South then led the club six, which was taken by West's ace. West continued with the diamond ace, queen and deuce, the last won by South's ten. On the third and fourth rounds of diamonds, dummy discarded the heart three and the spade five. East, already squeezed a little, let go the heart four and deuce. South then led to the club nine, which held when East very properly held up the king.

"On the second heart round, South had to be careful, of course, to discard a club not a spade from dummy. Now the lead of a small club accomplishes the three purposes mentioned.

"1. It sets up the fourth club.

"2. It endplayed East into giving up two spade tricks.

"3. Which in turn created the entry to the good club."

"South made three no trump, losing two diamonds and two clubs.

Japan protests ending of U. S. trade treaty . . . Billions more asked for national defense . . . Dies Committee investigates foreign propagandists.

While headlines such as these were making the Nation's front pages in recent weeks the same topics were being discussed by experts and laymen on C. B. S. "People's Platform," one of radio's Saturday highlights.

Facing the issue—the issue of the moment—is the aim of the "Platform." As soon as a new problem attains national significance, a forum of experts and average citizens is assembled by Producer Leon Levine and the "pros" and "cons" are thrashed out over the airwaves. Lyman Bryson, head of the C. B. S. Adult Education Board, serves as informal chairman.

"Is the United States propaganda-proof?" This is the question to be argued on the February 17 forum by Quincy Howe, famous author and editor; Norman Cousins, associate editor of Current History, and other noted authorities on world affairs.

The problem of trade relations with Japan was the basis for another timely discussion aired recently by the "Platform." The probable consequences of the expiration of America's trade treaty with Nippon in January were examined by such experts as Linton Wells, Elliot Janeway, Maj. E. F. Carlson and Walker Matheson.

New appropriations for national defense and a larger Navy was the subject of another recent forum discussion on the popular C. B. S. series which brought together Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Paul V. McNutt and Rear Admiral Reginald R. Belknap, U. S. N., retired.

THE DRAGON'S TEETH
By ELLERY QUEEN

Chapter 30

"THE CASE," said Mr. Queen abruptly, "or, rather, the solution of the case, hinges upon three facts. Three facts, and three pieces of evidence.

"The facts first. There are the three characteristics of the killer of Ann Bloomer which I've been able to piece together from an exhaustive analysis of the data at my disposal.

"The first characteristic is really a point of identification. As explained to you last night, Mr. Edmund De Carlos——" here De Carlos choked, and Mr. Quinn paused until he had swallowed the obstruction in his throat—"Mr. De Carlos by an oversight left behind him, when he called upon us disguised as Cadmus Cole three months ago, a fountain pen. This pen was unique in possessing certain identifying marks which distinguished it from all other pens of similar design and manufacture . . . despite the fact that such pens were, and are, sold by the hundreds of thousands the world over.

"Let me explain that statement. The scratches and dents—the entire series of little arced patterns on the cap of the pen—could only have been made by human teeth. Now human teeth are, in their modest way, an eloquent symbol of man: they are invariably imperfect. I'm not referring to dental caries or any other pathological manifestation. I'm referring simply to structure and design. No two sets of teeth, no matter how healthy, are identical. The shape of the arch, the size of the individual teeth, the way they lie in the arch in relation to one another, and so on—these all vary with individuals. Two sets of teeth might appear identical to the layman, but any dentist could show you dozens of points of difference after the most casual examination.

"It's scarcely necessary to belabor the point. In the old days any one could spot a set of false teeth in a stranger's mouth—the teeth were too regular. Unnaturally so. These days dentists hold a mirror up to Nature. They turn out dental plates which fool most laymen. And why are we fooled? Because modern dental plates exhibit teeth not only natural in color but irregularly aligned and imperfectly shaped as well.

"Criminological science has long recognized the value of teeth-marks as clews to identify. Where clear impressions of teeth can be found, they are as incontrovertible evidence as fingerprints. True, the teeth-marks on the cap of the fountain pen in question are not the impression of a full set of teeth, or even the substantial number of a full set. The marks of, at most, two or three upper teeth and two or three lowers. But even that is sufficient for the careful observer."

THEY WERE tightly, watchfully quiet, as if each had a deep personal stake in the least word being uttered by Mr. Queen. He glanced at his watch again.

"I must now confess," he went on with a faint smile, "to have engineered an unquestionably illegal suppression of important evidence. How important I leave you to judge. But I did suppress it when Mr. Rummell and I found it beneath the radiator of Room 1726 only a short time after the murderer of Ann Bloomer fled from it. In short, it was a companion-piece of the fountain pen—an automatic pencil of the same hard black rubber composition, with similar gold trimming."

Inspector Queen glared at District Attorney Sampson, who glared back, then both glared at Mr. Queen.

The inspector rose and roared: "You found what?"

"I'll take my punishment later, please," said Mr. Queen. "Meanwhile, may I continue? The facts were these: The room had been prepared for occupancy only a short time before, and was spotless. The pencil had fallen between the radiator and the window and had rolled under the radiator. Since the murderer stood at the window before and during the firing of the murder-weapon, it was obvious that the pencil had been dropped by that worthy accidentally during or directly preceding the commission of the crime. Incidentally, dad, the ashes, burnt matchstick and cigarette butt were mine. I left them for you—I had to leave something in lieu of the pencil, didn't I?"

Inspector Queen sank back, purple.

Mr. Queen continued in haste: "Examination of the pencil indicated that it was part of the writing set to which the pen belonged, that the same person had owned both implements, for the bite-marks on the pencil were identical with the bite-marks on the pen.

"NOW THAT," said Mr. Queen in a sharper tone, "is a scientific fact. I've verified that fact by applying for expert opinion since—a concession to legal considerations, for I was satisfied even before consulting authority that the teeth-marks were identical. The person who had the deplorable habit of chewing on his pen and pencil possesses a very long canine in a certain characteristic relation to the tooth below it and the teeth to either side. I could give you the technical picture as it was given to me, but I'm sure it would bore you.

"Just bear in mind that the dent bored by the point of that canine, and the impression of the teeth adjacent to that canine, make identification positive. The identical picture is presented by both pen and pencil. They must have been scarred by the same teeth.

"Now, who dropped that pencil in the room from which the shots were fired which killed Ann Bloomer? The person who occupied the room during the commission of the crime; in other words, the murderer. Or, in still other words—if we can establish the ownership of the pen-and-pencil set, we arrive at once at the identity of the murderer."

De Carlos was struggling to express himself.

"Yes, Mr. De Carlos?"

"It's not—it's not mine," he gasped. "Not mine!"

"No?" asked Mr. Queen softly. "Then perhaps we can eliminate a deal of gabble right now, Mr. De Carlos. If the pen and pencil aren't yours, to whom do they belong?"

De Carlos looked about in a sort of bafflement. Then his chin sank, and his eyes, and he muttered: "I'm not talking. I'm not saying a word."

"Perhaps the moment will come," murmured Mr. Queen, "when you will feel more disposed to conversation, Mr. De Carlos.

"Second characteristic of the murderer: a very curious point that I almost overlooked. Unfortunately for our bashful marksman, I am a methodical creature. I went back over the ground and saw it—really for the first time—in its proper perspective and proportions.

"The police on the day following Miss Shawn's and Mr. Rummell's supposed marriage, received an anonymous tip by telegraph. The obliging tipster indicated that the marriage had been no marriage at all. This information, followed by immediate corroboration when investigation proved the marriage, as advertised, to have been a hoax, supplied the authorities with a perfect motive in the case they were building against Miss Shawn.

"Now who would be interested in copper-riveting the case against Miss Shawn? Obviously the person who had stolen her revolver, who had used it to kill Ann Bloomer, and who had then tossed it into this room across the angle of the court from 1726—in other words, the thoughtful individual who was trying to frame Miss Shawn for the murder . . . the murderer in person. If any further corroboration of this deduction were needed, I should merely like to point out that the means employed in tipping off the police—telegraph message given to the telegraph office by telephoning from a pay-station—was exactly the means employed in reserving Room 1726 at the Villanoy on the night of the murder."

INSPECTOR QUEEN nodded guiltily, as if this indeed had occurred to him, and the district attorney reddened, as if it had not.

"Which brings us," continued Mr. Queen in dulcet tones, "to characteristic number three. On another and less memorable occasion I pointed out, through a strictly logical exercise, that the woman who posed as Margo Cole—that is, Ann Bloomer—must have had a partner . . . a silent, invisible partner who provided the notorious Miss Bloomer with the various proofs of identity which established her as one of the missing Cole heiresses.

"This silent partner had three motives for killing Ann Bloomer: revenge, if Miss Bloomer after being accepted as Margo Cole refused to split the loot—in the light of Miss Bloomer's known character, a distinct possibility; fear that she might expose her partner, either deliberately if she should accidentally be discovered to be an imposter, or—as actually occurred—through a slip of the tongue in an unguarded moment; and a third motive which I must again," Mr. Queen said with an apologetic smile, "hold back as a special tidbit for your future delectation.

"At any rate, discover the identity of Miss Bloomer's partner, the mysterious shadow behind her false claim, and you obviously discover her murderer.

"What do we find then, in recapitulation? That the person we seek is: A—the owner of the pen-and-pencil set; B—the person who tipped off the police to the fact that the supposed marriage between Miss Shawn and Mr. Rummell was a hoax; and C—Ann Bloomer's silent partner.

"Or, to put it another way, we must find the one and only person who had criminal opportunity—the pencil places that person in the room from which the fatal shots were fired; who had criminal motive—as Ann Bloomer's vengeful partner seeking also to seal her lips forever as to his identity, and who wished to frame Miss Shawn—and did so by tipping off the police about the fake marriage.

"That's a fairly complete picture," murmured Mr. Queen. "Need I continue? Won't our friend the silent partner step forward and end this excruciating suspense?"

And in the ensuing silence Mr. Queen thought furiously: "Damn Beau! Why isn't he here?"

And, also in the silence, as if in response to Mr. Queen's unexpressed question, the telephone rang.

They started, nervously. But Mr. Queen smiled as he leaped for the telephone. "A call I've been expecting. You'll excuse me?"

A voice said in his ear—a tired but jubilant voice: "Beau Rummell. Who is this?"

"You're speaking to the proper party," said Mr. Queen sharply. "Well?"

"I've got the goods, my fran'."

"Well, well." Mr. Queen expelled a long, ecstatic breath. "How soon can you be here with the—er—merchandise?"

"I'm downtown. Say 15 minutes. How's it going?"

"So far, so good."

"Save the last poke for me. Kerrie all right?"

"Bearing up like a Spartan. Hurry, will you?"

MR. QUEEN hung up and turned again to his audience. There was a rustle among them—the strangest little sound. Not of impatience. Nor of fatigue. Nor yet of relief from the unnatural silence. Rather it was the redition of a tension, a physical expression to relieve an intolerable strain.

And one face there was ghastly.

Mr. Queen chose to ignore its damning pallor. He remarked cheerfully: "Let's examine Point B more closely. Who tipped off the police that the marriage was a hoax, thereby driving the last nail into the frame-up of Miss Shawn?

"There were four persons who knew the marriage was a hoax before the tip was sent. And only four.

"One was my partner, Beau Rummell, the 'bridegroom.' Well, how about Mr. Rummell as a possibility? No, no, he is eliminated on numerous counts. I need mention only one. At the instant the shots were fired Mr. Rummell was stepping out of the elevator on the seventeenth floor of the Villanoy. The elevator operator has testified to this. Since a body cannot occupy two different sections of space at the same time, Mr. Rummell obviously couldn't also have been in Room 1726 at that instant. And so he cannot be the person we are looking for."

Mr. Queen lit a cigarette. "The second person who knew the marriage was a hoax was—myself. I could make out some excellent arguments against the theory that I was Ann Bloomer's accomplice and subsequent murderer, of course——"

"Keep going," growled District Attorney Sampson.

"Thank you, Mr. Sampson," murmured Mr. Queen. "A mafinificent compliment. By the way, Miss Day—I believe you're Miss Day, although I've never been formally presented—why are you looking so completely miserable?"

Vi jumped visibly, going pale at having every-one's attention so abruptly focussed upon her. "I—accused Beau Rummell of . . . Never mind. Of course, I didn't know——"

"I see." Mr. Queen smiled. "Mr. Rummell's told me all about that. Very amusing. I hope you'll apologize, Miss Day."

Kerrie smiled and pressed Vi's hand, and Vi sank back, on the verge of tears.

Bulk of Finn Contributions In Small Sums

Dr. Walsh Hits Reports That Charity Is Confined To 'Society Pastime'

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., chairman, Washington Unit of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., last night attacked reports that American effort on behalf of Finnish civilians "is a pathetic pastime confined largely to society circles and high-hat festivals," removed from the man in the street.

These reports he ascribed to "certain newspaper commentators."

"I deem it a duty based on my personal observation and my own direct experience with contributors to deny emphatically and repudiate any such attempt to dry up the source of human charity by statements which, if not malicious, are entirely arbitrary and in contradiction with the realities," he said.

Large Donations Few

Large donations, he said, have been relatively small here, with the majority of contributions ranging from 25 cents upward. There are a vast number of one, two, three and five and ten-dollar contributions, he said.

This type of assistance occupies the major space in the records, he said. "I have just looked over some 250 entries and find only 17 over $100. Not only is this true of Washington but the audited records of the national headquarters will show that over $1,000,000 were contributed in sums of $1 each.

"It was precisely this magnificent response from the man in the street which induced some of the leading industrialists and bankers to assure the authorities charged with the campaign that industrial and banking circles regarded it as a challenge to them to go and do likewise among those of greater means," he said.

"They have promised to duplicate the first million contributed by the man in the street," he said. The "deluge of letters" he has received with small sums enclosed justifies "me in saying that this latest attempt to obstruct the greatest popular response on record in the United States must be based either on ignorance or malice."

Turkey Expects Italy to Replace Trade With Nazis

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Feb. 11.—Conclusion of an Italian-Turkish trade agreement was reported today by official quarters, with the prediction that Italy would oust Germany from the expanding Turkish market as a result of the pact.

Informed circles acclaimed the agreement, expected to be signed shortly, as evidence of growing mutual confidence between Italy and Turkey and said it gave promise of an early political rapprochement.

These circles said the pact carried great political significance because it would align Italy beside Britain and France in reestablishing Turkey's economy, which has been greatly shaken by the virtual suspension of trade with the Reich.

Meanwhile it was stated that British and French technical experts are en route to Istanbul to take the places of some 100 German technicians dismissed from government advisory posts and ordered to leave the country.

Inquiry on Hague Complete, Jackson Weighs Charges

By the United Press

The Department of Justice Civil Liberties Unit has completed an extensive investigation of alleged civil rights violations by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, it was learned reliably last night.

A voluminous report has been handed to Henry Schweinhaut, head of the unit which must decide in conference with Attorney General Robert H. Jackson whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant presentation of the case to a grand jury.

It could not be learned what specific violations were alleged. It was said, however, that the case does not embrace the C. I. O. freedom of speech and assembly controversy in which the Supreme Court ruled against Hague, nor the "forcible" deportation of Socialist leader Norman Thomas when he attempted to speak in Jersey City.

Hague is the Democratic boss of New Jersey, and is a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Garner Picking Men to Check On Campaigns

Senatorial Committee Unlikely to Lean Toward New Deal

By the Associated Press

Vice President Garner will appoint a Senate campaign investigating committee this week, and friends said he was determined to pick one which would leave no stone unturned in ferreting out alleged fraud and excessive expenditures in the selection of Presidential and Vice Presidential electors as well as Senators.

A resolution adopted by the Senate last week authorized the special committee and made $30,000 available for its inquiries into primary and general election campaigns.

The complexion of the committee is not likely to be overly friendly to the present Administration.

The two Republican places on the five-member group are expected to go to Senators Tobey, of New Hampshire, and Reed, of Kansas. Garner's friends said he would choose the three Democrats from a list submitted, at Garner's request, by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Elections Committee. Few New Dealers thought that George, whose renomination was opposed by President Roosevelt in 1938, had included any of their number on the list.

No Senator from a State where there is a senatorial election this year may serve on the committee. This leaves only 28 Democrats eligible. Of these, Senators Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina; Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island; Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado; and Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, were reported to be under consideration.

The 1938 campaign committee headed by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, was sharply critical of methods employed by some candidates in senatorial primaries. Its findings were credited with having had much to do with winning congressional approval for the Hatch law banning pernicious political activities by Federal employes.
